I. Peacebuilding Context and Rationale for PBF support

a) Peacebuilding context

Former Gambian President, Yahya Jammeh, went into exile on 21 January 2017, leaving behind a legacy of human rights abuses, near empty coffers, and an institutional vacuum. He ruled for 22 years with an iron fist and little regard for democratic and human rights principles. A culture of fear and silence was imposed on the country through a repressive defense and security apparatus. Under Jammeh, the institutions of the State, including the military, police, Parliament, judiciary, civil service and local administrative structures were progressively politicized and turned into adjuncts of his Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction (APRC) regime. The entire social fabric significantly degenerated as a result of protracted repressive rule. Given the divisive tactics of Jammeh's regime, ethnic and tribal divides crept into Gambian socio-political discourse, causing antagonistic relations between ethnic groups.

During the Jammeh era, scores of political figures, journalists, civil society activists and students were allegedly harassed, detained, tortured, murdered, made to disappear or forced into exile. The freedom of expression, association and assembly were severely restricted and several critical media houses were closed down. Justice institutions were systematically manipulated to preserve the oppressive regime in power. There was constant interference and arbitrary removal of independent-minded judges by the executive. Consequently, there is limited public confidence in the judiciary, as former President Jammeh dispensed crude justice by throwing opponents in prison, and often determining publicly their sentences. Justice delivery has been slow, and there has been a marked deficit in access to justice. The perception of a compliant judiciary was exacerbated by the role played by the judiciary in trying to extend the President's tenure after he rejected the election result.

The Gambia is among the poorest countries in the world, with nearly half of its population living below the absolute poverty line of US$1.25 per day. Available data indicate that almost 30% of the active labor force is unemployed, with slightly higher unemployment rate in the rural areas (31.1%) than the urban area (28.4%). Moreover, unemployment is highest for the youth at 39% (Gambia Bureau of Statistics). Among illegal migrants to Europe across the Mediterranean, Gambians are disproportionately represented. According to some estimates, Gambians make up the second biggest contingent of migrants from West Africa, despite the country's small population size.

The population of The Gambia is made of 51% of women and girls. The main national reference documents for addressing The Gambia's commitments to the Beijing Platform for Action (BPFA) is the National Policy for The Advancement of Gambian Women (NPAGW) 1999-2009. The NPAGW policy was reviewed and replaced by the Gender and Women's Empowerment Policy 2010 - 2020. The current policy is designed to address the gaps in the 1999 policy, and to consolidate the progress made so far, and expressly ensure that a gender perspective is incorporated at all levels of planning, resource allocation and implementation of development projects. The priority areas for the 2010-2020 Policy are not only in consonance with the critical areas of concern identified in the Beijing Platform for Action, but they also incorporate the national development standards as follows: 1. Gender and Education, 2. Gender and Health, 3. Gender and Sustainable Livelihoods Development, 4. Gender and Governance, 5. Gender and Human Rights, and 6. Poverty Reduction and Economic Empowerment. In addition to this main policy document, it is worth, noting the existence the national development blue print enshrined in Vision 2020, the Programme of Accelerated Growth and Employment, 2012-2015(PAGE), and all the sectoral policies relevant to the critical areas of concern identified in the Beijing Platform for Action. It is also premised on the 1997 Constitution of The Gambia, under Section 33, subsection (4), which clearly prohibits all forms of discrimination based on gender. In addition to the signing of the Beijing Declaration 1995, the government of The Gambia has signed and ratified several International and Regional Conventions promoting the rights of women and girls, e.g. the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), the AU Solemn Declaration on Gender Equality in Africa, the African Charter on Human and People's Rights on the Rights of Women in Africa. In domesticating these conventions, the government signed and promulgated the Women's Act 2010 (2015 Amendment banning Female Genital Mutilation), the Sexual Offences Act 2013, the Domestic Violence Act 2013 and the 2016 Amendment to the Child Act banning Child and Forced Marriage. Despite these strong legal and policy frameworks, women, girls and youth continue to face significant challenges. While the constitution has provisions that ensure gender equality, there are still discriminatory provisions in the Law pertaining to the Personal Status of Women. It is a known fact that women and girls have suffered human rights violations in the hands of the state and security personnel, but rights violations have remained unreported by the victims and have not been reflected in CEDAW periodic reports, mainly due to the fear that prevailed in the country under the former Government.

Following the tension-filled but peaceful alternation of power from former President Jammeh to President Adama Barrow in The Gambia, there is urgent need for reforms to promote democratic governance, respect for the rule of law and human rights, socio-economic recovery, sustainable development and peace. Since the assumption of office of the new government, there is a strong demand from the public to address the injustices of the past. The litany of previous human rights violations and abuses and testimonies from survivors and family members of those who were allegedly summarily executed, or who are still missing are making the headlines of local newspapers every day, calling for justice, investigations and prosecutions to find out the truth and to receive answers from the new government as to what happened. The Gambian public is increasingly calling for justice and reparation, especially those who were illegally arrested and detained, tortured, dismissed from their jobs, or deprived of their properties (land, vehicles, etc.). The Minister of Justice indicated that if all the emerging complaints were to be lodged in courts, the justice system would be overwhelmed with proceedings and could fail to process them successfully given its currently limited capacities. But on the other hand, if these claims are left unaddressed and the calls for justice and accountability for crimes and human rights violations committed in the past go unheeded, stability in the country could be seriously jeopardized.

Government commitment and intentions

Going forward, President Barrow and his Government have indicated their commitment to respecting, protecting and upholding people's fundamental rights, including ensuring freedom of expression, equal access to justice, the right to the truth, the right to be free from discrimination and the right to take part in the conduct of public affairs. While the Government has announced and reiterated its wish to establish as soon as possible a Truth and Reconciliation Commission to seek accountability for past human rights violations and abuses, it has also indicated its commitment to preserve the national unity and foster reconciliation of all Gambians. In this context, the Government has underlined the need to investigate the alleged human rights violations and abuses committed during former President Jammeh's regime, and to establish mechanisms for truth seeking, justice and healing as a top priority after 22 years of oppression. It has also indicated its willingness to learn from the experiences of other countries before developing the best model for The Gambia.

As a first step, and while considering which model of truth and reconciliation should be adopted, the Government has set up a Panel of missing persons. This panel has received so far complaints of about 33 cases of rape, murder and enforced or involuntary disappearances. The Government has stressed the importance of restoring the trust of the Gambian population in the justice system. During the UN Inter-Agency Mission fielded in February 2017, both the Chief Justice and the Attorney General underscored the need to revise the Constitution in order to ensure the independence of the judiciary, the independence of the media and enhanced civilian and parliamentary oversight of the security services. There is commitment to establish a National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) without delay to monitor human rights, assist victims of violations and contribute to the formulation of national policies on human rights.

The Government also plans to revoke or amend laws that hinder human rights and enact laws, establish institutions and law enforcement practices, which will enlarge and protect the rights and freedoms of all. It reiterated its commitment to sign and ratify international treaties, including the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (hereafter Convention against Torture) and the International Convention for the Protection of all persons from Enforced Disappearances. It stressed the need to monitor the compliance with treaty obligations, including through the Universal Periodic Review of the Human Rights Council. The government is also ready to review and reform legislation pertaining to the freedom of the media.

To initiate all these efforts, the Gambian government underlined that in order to establish a Transitional Justice Mechanism (TJM) additional funding, experience sharing, guidance, accompaniment, and training are required. Assistance is needed to develop and strengthen legal and technical capacities to establish a TJM, including the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC), in compliance with international standards. However, at the moment, the mandate of the future TRC remains undefined. In order to establish a functioning National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) in line with the Paris principles, additional technical support is needed in terms of legal provisions, procedures, training and support to guarantee the NHRC's independence and operational capacity.

In the short term, the Gambian authorities, together with national and international stakeholders interested in supporting the Transitional Justice Mechanism, should further explore best practices and lessons learned to decide on the modality that would best fit the Gambian context and reality. Technical support is recommended to assist the Government in holding national consultations, an important element to ensure that the transitional justice process is nationally owned, legitimate and has the full support of the public. Technical assistance should also be considered in the drafting of a National Transitional Justice Strategy to address the four pillars of traditional justice - prosecutions, truth seeking, reparations and reforms for non-recurrence - for a sustainable TJM. Technical assistance should be considered for the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC).

b) Mapping of existing peacebuilding activities and gaps:

The Gambia is determined to build from scratch a new democratic society compliant with the rule of law and human rights. Even though many partners have expressed interest in supporting The Gambia to achieve national reconciliation and build a lasting peace, no significant peacebuilding activities have yet started on the ground.

The International Center for Transitional Justice conducted early March 2017 an exploratory mission to The Gambia and expressed interest in supporting the Government in the transitional justice area. No specific project exists yet. The UK has committed to deploy a Gambian Senior Advisor to support the government in its constitutional and institutional reform agenda. The International Committee of Red Cross has expressed interest in supporting the country in the areas of detention and penitentiary reforms, missing persons and migration. The ECOWAS is planning to support efforts to set up an international contact group on The Gambia and strengthen the National Peace infrastructure. The European Union-funded project on Access to Justice is due to close down in July 2017. As for Government initiatives, the Minister of Interior established a Panel of missing persons tasked to collect testimonies from families and relatives of persons who have not been accounted for following their arrest or abduction under the previous regime. On the other hand, the Government has initiated prosecution of senior security officers accused of serious human rights violations and crimes. With all these initiatives announced, the need for proper coordination of donor efforts on political reforms, human rights, reconciliation and TJ appear more evident.

In addition to the existing capacity within the UNDP The Gambia on governance and human rights, support has been provided by the OHCHR Office for West Africa, a Human Rights Officer and a Rule of Law Advisor deployed by DPA and UNDP as part of the surge capacity team to provide temporarily support to the UNCT in The Gambia in delivering support on rule of law, justice, security and human rights, including transitional justice. There is a necessity to support the various stakeholders on a permanent basis in the country, while for the sake of coordination and sustainability (after the PBSO funding) longer term capacity on rule of law, transitional justice and human rights within the UNCT needs to be ensured, with initial support of this project.

With respect to conflict prevention, the West Africa Network for Peacebuilding (WANEP), a prominent civil society organization, has a presence in The Gambia and is partnering with UNDP in election-related conflict prevention initiatives through the Civil Society Coalition on Elections. The Inter-Party Committee established prior to the December elections with UNDP support also serves as a forum for dispute resolution among political parties. The Working Group on Women Peace and Security in The Gambia conducts awareness creation on UN Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1325 (2000). However, these initiatives are ad-hoc, uncoordinated and mainly elections focused. Most importantly none of them has conducted a conflict analysis of The Gambia to inform their interventions.

c) Rationale for this IRF

During the UN Inter-Agency Mission to The Gambia in February 2017, the Government indicated the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms and the setting up of a Human Rights Commission as two of its urgent priorities to help diffuse and manage mounting tension and pressure from the population to know the truth and see justice done following the abuses and human rights violations and abuses that they have suffered during the Jammeh's regime.

Following the Inter-Agency Mission, the Resident Coordinator and UNCT held a series of meetings with various authorities including the Minister of Justice and the Minister of Interior. All of them have explicitly requested support from the UN to strengthen their capacities and help establish transitional justice mechanisms, including a Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

To ensure that families of victims and survivors enjoy their rights to know the truth, to see justice done, to receive reparations and be protected against further violations of their rights, the UN has committed to support the initiative of the Gambian Government to embark on its transitional justice project without delay.

In this regard, the PBF is considered to have unique comparative advantages to support the Gambian Government to quickly start the sensitive but crucial endeavors, which will entail the designing of a comprehensive strategy for TJ for The Gambia.

In this regard, the PBF supported project will give the chance to the government and all stakeholders including victims associations, the population at large, the media, the donor community, individual experts and international organizations (International Center for Transitional Justice, Human Rights NGOs, etc.) to contribute inclusively and substantively to the development of a comprehensive transitional justice strategy in a coordinated and orderly manner, and avoid gaps, duplication and mistakes inherent to the proliferation of ad-hoc and uncoordinated efforts and initiatives on this important matter. As a result, it is expected that the victims and the population will feel reassured and the current tension will drop, which ultimately will contribute to sustain the peace in the country. In addition, the creation of a National Human Rights Commission will send a strong signal of relief and assurance to the population that not only the Government has started dealing with past violations, but also structures and institutions are in place to protect them against future human rights violations.

Project strategy and sequencing

The changed political context in The Gambia presents great opportunity to advance justice, healing, accountability and reconciliation. This project will provide catalytic initiatives that will lay the necessary foundation for full-scale transitional justice. It will be implemented in a phased manner with two main phases:

In the Phase 1, the project will provide: the following support:

1. High-level technical support and advice to Government on transitional justice (TJ) approaches and mechanisms for The Gambia that are in line with international standards and principles (e.g. inclusive, victim centric, based on equal rights, promote national healing, etc.);
 - a. Deployment of Senior Advisor on Transitional Justice and creation of appropriate technical support capacity to work on the project (terms of reference of posts in Annex ...);
 - b. Fielding of an advisory mission by the Special Rapporteur on the promotion of truth, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence to The Gambia for high-level government engagements on TJ approaches and mechanisms;
 - c. Support to convene an inclusive National Conference on TJ processes and approaches
 - d. Undertake comprehensive needs assessment to identify key areas, which will be the focus of a national transitional justice strategy and its implementation.
2. Convening of a National Stakeholders' Conference on justice and human rights to provide a forum for inclusive dialogue and primary consultations prior to the formulation of a transitional justice strategy. The conference will identify key challenges, needs, gaps and priorities, taking into account the historical, political, social and cultural context and discuss the merit of the main pillars or axis that would form the Gambian TJ strategy. The conference will also agree on a roadmap or action plan. Beyond the TJ problematic, the conference will explore key areas such as: i) Building/strengthening the human rights architecture /institutions; ii) Constitutional review and legal reform (including media law review); iii) Justice and penitentiary sector reform; and iv) Civil Society and Media Engagement (including engagement of youth and women's empowerment). The conference will examine how all these areas are inter-related and will adopt recommendations that would serve in the formulation of the TJ strategy. As prescribed by the Guidance Note of the Secretary-General, on the United Nations Approach to Transitional Justice, the at each stage of the consultative process including the stakeholders' Conference, arrangements will be made to ensure the participation of disadvantaged groups including children who have suffered violations of their rights. Since children also have the right to express their views in matters and proceedings affecting them, in accordance with their evolving capacities, child-friendly policies and procedures will be put in place to protect the rights of child victims and witnesses of crime involved.
3. With complementary funding (from UNDP), organization of a study tour to South Africa and Sierra Leone for government officials to learn from the lessons and experiences of these countries on policy, strategy and implementation of transitional justice mechanisms;
4. Through the project help to kick-start essential support efforts to strengthen the foundation and knowledge base of key actor and participation for the proposed TJ strategy and mechanisms for broader stakeholder participation with regard to accountability for past abuses through:

- a. Targeted institution and capacity building activities for stakeholders to support strategy development efforts;
- b. Support the strengthening of the justice system to ensure justice for disadvantaged groups, especially women and children. With regard to children, to provide restorative and child friendly services to children victims of human rights violation and support the rehabilitation of the most vulnerable children, especially girls, exposed to human rights violations during the Jammeh's regime;
5. Support to Government and other national stakeholders to elaborate a comprehensive National Strategy on TJ based on broad national consultations, and assessment of needs;
6. Support outreach and communication of information and knowledge on TJ and TRC processes - the design of appropriate public awareness raising, outreach and communication efforts on TJ and TRC issues/processes in order to encourage the importance of broad public participation;

The Phase 2 will provide support to:

7. Review and/or support the development of important legislation, rules and procedures, and institutions (including a framework for a National Human Rights Commission) that are essential for the effective TJ implementation;
8. Strengthen capacities of important institutions and actors that will lead the implementation of national TJ strategy, and strengthening the capacity of Government and State institutions responsible for implementing accountability, justice, human rights and reconciliation to include:
 - a. Technical and logistical support for substantive activities like (gathering of evidence and testimonies, investigation, hearings, victims and witness protection, etc.);
 - b. provide technical expertise such as forensic experts, senior investigators or pathologists to enable the High courts to conduct proper investigations into high profile cases during the TJ process;
 - c. Support capacity building for law enforcement officers on investigation of international crimes, including dealing with mass graves, training and experience sharing on victim and witness protection;
 - d. Capacity building for judges and prosecutors to process international crimes;
 - e. Capacity building for lawyers on cases of international crimes, support legal aid service provision for victims and defendants of international crimes;
 - f. Support to enable the Government of the Gambia to strengthen justice for disadvantaged group, including children system that will provide child friendly services to children victims of human right violation in view of rehabilitating them and repairing the damage caused to them by the violation.
9. Mobilise resource for TJ follow-up activities to include – efforts to identify, outsource and mobilize expertise and resources, in a coordinated manner from the international community on TJ.

The present project-document will elaborate only on outcomes, outputs and activities pertaining to the first phase. Activities that would be implemented during the second phase will be contingent on the results of a needs assessment that would be carried out at the end of the first phase.

Gender mainstreaming

A gender perspective will be mainstreamed into all the components and activities that will be implemented under this project. During the consultations, the victims' needs assessment will integrate specific questions on the need of men and women, data gathered will be aggregated by sex. Specific gender issues embedded in the social, institutional and cultural environment will be researched and their possible correlation with past human rights abuses will be established, if any.

While promoting an inclusive and victim centered approach (through a constant engagement with victim groups), the implementing agencies will ensure that when dealing with any target group, the opinions of men and women will be equally sought on the different aspects of the future TJ mechanisms whether through questionnaires or focus group discussions. The organization of interviews and focus groups discussions will take into account not only language barriers but also the gender dimension to enable women and men to express themselves freely and without prejudice, discrimination or stigmatization. The composition of the teams implementing the project will be gender-balanced and questions on sexo-specific initiatives within society, de-facto or de jure discrimination, gender equality, sexual and gender-based violence will be asked to men and women in assessing their needs.

The composition of the team carrying out the study tour as well as the participants involved in the stakeholders' Conference and national consultations should be gender balanced. Also, the agenda, timing and logistical aspects shall take into account the gender perspective. All efforts will be made during the implementation of the project to face and mitigate gender-related challenges such as stereotypes on women, gender skepticism, opinion according to which the gender aspects are over-emphasized or perceived incompatibilities between the local culture and gender-equality.

II. Objectives of PBF support and proposed implementation

a) Project outcomes, theory of change, activities and targets

(i) Outcome statement

Overall this project aims to support The Gambia in its effort to deal with the legacies of the past human rights violations and abuses, and to help the delivery of justice, truth and healing its society. The first phase of this project aims at supporting the Government in developing a comprehensive and inclusive strategy for accountability for past abuses, fostering healing and national reconciliation while the second phase will provide a limited and catalytic support to create a key institution by way of a National Human Rights Commission (NHRC), and capacity to begin to establish a strong culture of respect for human rights in The Gambia.

Theory of change

IF the legacy of past human rights violations and abuses is addressed in a comprehensive, inclusive, principled, rights-based, victim-centered manner, THEN the healing of past grievances will be promoted AND the population can build new confidence and trust in State institutions.

ii) Expected outcomes

Outcome 1: The Government is endowed with a comprehensive national TJ strategy – resulting from informed choices, inclusive and participatory consultation processes and international best practices - to ensure truth and accountability for past human rights violations.

Output 1.1. Capacities of the Government and victims associations strengthened to conduct and participate in inclusive, nation-wide consultations and learn best practices from other countries in the region in order to make informed choices while developing their transitional justice strategy and plan.

Phase 1:

Activity 1: Identify and deploy a high-profile international expert on Transitional Justice (at P5 level) and a small technical support team (led by a Project Coordinator, P4) to advise and guide the Government on alternative strategies and approaches for implementing its transitional justice in The Gambia, and to gather and/or prepare the essential background reference documents (including a conflict analysis);

Activity 2: Field the Special Rapporteur Trust, Justice, Reparations and Guarantees of Non-recurrence to consult and advice leadership in The Gambia on reconciliation and accountability approaches and mechanisms;

Activity 3: Support the organization of a governmental seminar on transitional justice to help decision-makers better understand the process and challenges, understand the importance of adopting a human rights based and gender-sensitive approach to TJ, harmonize internally their views and approaches, conduct a proper and realistic programming and better manage rights holders' expectations.

Activity 4: Government to set up and maintain an inclusive and gender-balanced Technical Committee designed to hold on-going consultations with relevant stakeholders and elaborate a national strategy for transitional justice, addressing the four traditional pillars: prosecutions, truth seeking, reparations and reforms for non-recurrence.

Activity 5: Support a joint delegation of Gambian authorities and a representative of victims groups to conduct a study tour to South Africa and Sierra Leone to learn from their TJ experience and best practices;

Activity 6: Support the organization of a National Stakeholders' Conference on justice and human rights. Among others, the conference will provide a forum for inclusive dialogue and consultations regarding the design of a national transitional justice strategy in The Gambia. It will identify key challenges, gaps, priorities and a roadmap/action plan.

This support includes among others:

- a) Supporting the visit of the UN Special Rapporteur on Truth, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence ideally during the stakeholder's forum to identify, exchange and promote good practices and lessons learned;
- b) Identifying and ensuring the participation of renowned international experts in the field of transitional justice who will be resource persons, moderators or facilitators.
- c) Provision of expert advice and covering logistical needs.

NB: The High Commissioner for Human Rights or his representative will be represented at the Conference and will actively participate.

Activity 7: Support the organization of nation-wide and inclusive consultations involving all components and sectors of the Gambian society through a sampling methodology that ensures a fair representation of all ethnic or tribal groups and socio-professional categories, including political parties, victims and marginalised groups, as well as women's associations (to ensure the transitional justice process is nationally owned, legitimate and has the full support of the public). These consultations would serve as a small-scale perception study. The activity will include media outreach activities to secure broad participation. It will also entail from the UN:

- a) Supporting the recruitment for one month of one international expert and one national Assistant expert who have experience in conducting national consultations related to transitional justice or similar surveys.
- b) Provision of technical advice by UN experts;
- c) Supporting the implementation of the consultations by covering logistical needs (transportation, and consultation fees (2 weeks) for data collectors (2 teams of 2 data collectors supervised by one team leader for each rural region and 3 teams of 2 data collectors supervised by one team leader in urban regions), data entry specialists, catering services, stationary, etc.
- d) Supporting the presentation and validation of the findings and recommendations contained in the survey report.

Activity 8: Provide technical and logistical support to the Committee for the Victims of Jammeh's Atrocities to facilitate the mobilization of victims' families and survivors and enable their full involvement and participation or representation throughout to the consultative processes. This includes among others, support to the following preparatory activities:

III. Management and coordination

a) Project management:

OHCHR and UNDP Cooperating Agreement:

OHCHR and UNDP have entered into a cooperating agency agreement to facilitate for the implementation of this project. OHCHR does not have office presence in The Gambia while UNDP has a full-fledged country office. Under this memorandum of understanding, UNDP serves as the Recipient UN organization (RUNO) for this project with full accountability for project resources. On the substance of transitional justice, OHCHR will be the Lead Agency in providing technical expertise and guidance, while UNDP will retain responsibility for the management of the project. OHCHR as the specialized agency on Transitional Justice matters will be responsible for i) the substantive activities of the project, i.e. technical planning, identification/selection of experts, and lead on strategy design, consultation and drafting functions, and quality assurance. Release of project resources will be done by UNDP working in close consultation with OHCHR and the Resident Coordinator. OHCHR will take the lead on preparing project working budgets for implementation by UNDP and in close consultations with the Resident Coordinator.

UN Agency(s) Capacity

OHCHR has developed a longstanding experience in providing substantive technical support to countries undergoing transitional justice processes in many parts of the world on varieties of transitional justice contexts and will draw on expertise from other parts of the UN systems as required. For instance, at its headquarters in Geneva, OHCHR has a team of rule of law and transitional justice specialists who have, inter alia published a number of Rule of Law tools for post-conflict societies, including prosecution, truth seeking, reconciliation and institutional reform.

UNDP Gambia Country Office currently has a Governance and Human Rights Team comprising of one Programme Analyst, one Programme Specialist and one Programme Associate. The Deputy Resident Representative for Programme and Operations supervises the team and will have the responsibility for the daily oversight and quality assurance function of this project. Overall the Country Office manages an overall budget of USD 7 million. Given the nature of the previous national administration, the Country Office has over the past 3 years spent approximately USD 500,000 USD per annum on governance interventions.

In addition to the existing capacity within the UNDP- Gambia on governance and human rights, support is provided by the OHCHR Office for West Africa on human rights; and a Human Rights Officer, a Peace and Development Advisor and a Rule of Law Advisor was deployed as part of the Surge capacity team, providing temporarily support to the UNCT in The Gambia delivering support on rule of law, justice, security and human rights, including transitional justice. However, there is a necessity to support the various stakeholders on a permanent basis in the country. While for the sake of coordination and sustainability (after the PBSO funding) longer term capacity on rule of law, transitional justice and human rights within the UNCT needs to be ensured, with initial support from this project.

Concerning programme initiation and planning, the Country Office as part of its broader Rule of Law and Justice programme and in collaboration with OHCHR will also be recruiting one Transitional Justice Advisor at P5, who will supervise the whole Transitional Justice work. He will be the Project Coordinator and will be assisted by a P4 Human Rights/Transitional Justice Specialist, preferably with knowledge and expertise in Program management. The Team will have an appropriate Project Management Unit including one G6 Administrative and Finance Assistant with expertise in project management (Refer to the Project Organizational Structure below). All of them will be part of the Project Management Unit and will work as a seamless team under the leadership of the Transitional Justice Advisor to provide technical and advisory inputs into the implementation and the day-to-day administration of the project.

It should also be highlighted that the Project Team and the UN Country Office can draw on the expertise of its Bureau Programme and Policy Support (BPPS), the UNDP Regional Hub in Addis Ababa as well as other UNDP Country Offices such as South Africa, Sierra Leone, Ghana, Guinea, Kenya, Togo and others with recent experience in transitional justice processes to augment its knowledge base and capacity. In addition technical and substantive guidance will be provided by a number of UN Special Rapporteurs as mentioned in the narrative through WARO.

Coordination arrangements with Government

In addition, it is anticipated that the Technical Committee referred to in the narrative could serve as an oversight body for this project in consultation with national counterpart ministries, department and agencies.

The Technical Committee is expected to be gender-balanced and composed of nine (9) members including:

Government:

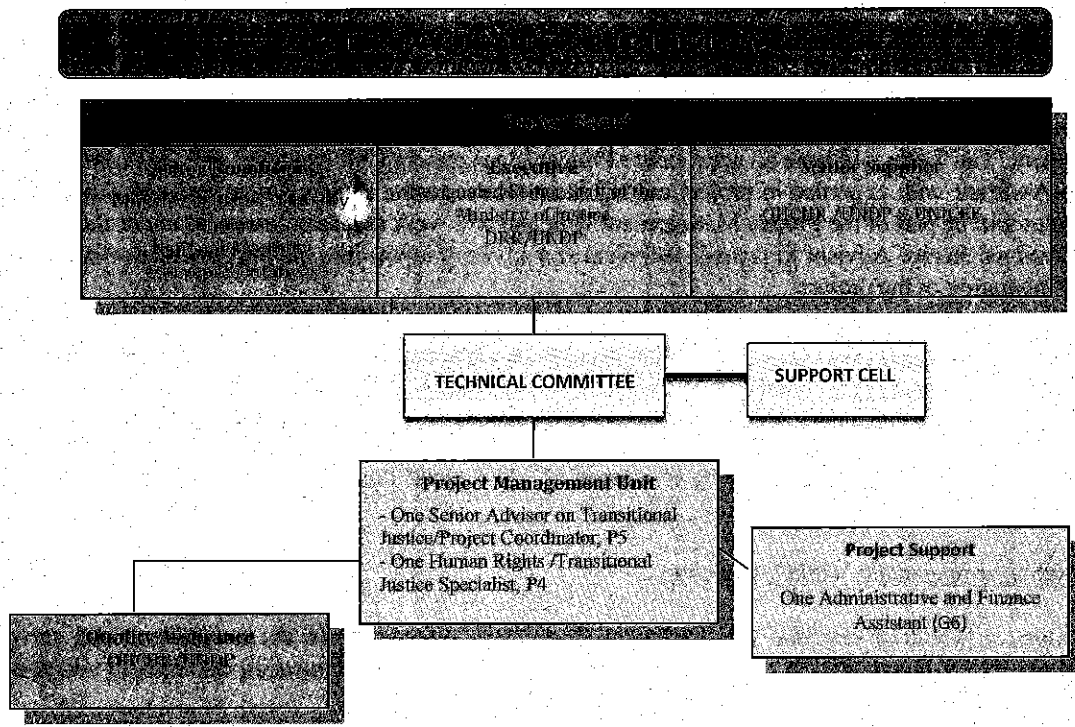

1. Presidency or the Office of Vice-President: 1 representative
2. Ministry of Justice: 2 representatives
3. Ministry of Interior: 1 representative (from the Office of the Inspector General of Police)
4. Women Bureau: 1 representative
5. National Assembly: 1 representative (Chair of Legal Committee)

Civil society organizations:

6. Human Rights Non-Governmental Organization/Victims association: 1 representatives
7. Youth organisation: 1 representative
8. Religious groups and traditional chieftaincies: 1 representative

It is suggested that the governing body of the Technical Committee be composed of a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and a Rapporteur or Secretary.

The draft ToR for the Technical Committee also provides for a Support Cell composed of technical experts from the United Nations, the ECOWAS, the African Union Commission for People and Human Rights, the European Union Delegation, United Kingdom, the United States of America's Embassies and representatives of international NGOs such as the International Centre for Transitional Justice will assist the Technical Committee and other stakeholders.

Project coordination

The project will be implemented under the direct implementation modality. The UNDP, with substantive input from OHCHR will assume direct responsibility for the implementation in liaison with the Office of the Minister of Justice. A Programme Management Unit will be established to work with the Technical Committee and coordinate the activities under this programme. The management structure described in the chart above is a structure specifically designed to manage the project to its conclusion, and it consists of roles and responsibilities that bring together the various interests and skills involved in, and required by, the project.

The Project Board

A Project Board (PB) will be established and chaired by the Minister of Justice. Members of the Board will be limited, and comprise a representative of UNDP, OHCHR, Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Interior, ECOWAS, and other national and international stakeholders may be invited at the Board's discretion and may be called upon to provide technical clarity on implementation of the project activities on which they are collaborating with OHCHR, UNDP and the Project Team. The UNDP Project Management Unit (PMU) will provide Secretariat services to the board. The Board will meet on a quarterly basis, or more frequently as required.

A Project Management Unit (PMU) will be the dedicated unit that administers and manages the project. The PMU will be responsible for the day-to-day running of the project and will serve as a Secretariat to the PB.

OHCHR

Through its regional Office based in Dakar and the Senior Human Rights Advisor, OHCHR will provide substantive input and guidance throughout the implementation of the project.

United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)

UNDP through its Inclusive Governance and Human Rights Unit will serve as a senior supplier to the Project Board for project quality assurance through undertaking of oversight and independent assessments of the project activities, results, reporting and internal and external audit.

b) Risk management:

Table 6 - Risk management matrix

Risks to the achievement of PBF outcomes	Likelihood of occurrence (high, medium, low)	Severity of risk impact (high, medium, low)	Mitigating Strategy (and Person/Unit responsible)

Parliamentary Hearing sessions to build the capacity of the Members of the Parliament on National Human Rights Institutions and the Paris Principles.

c) Monitoring & evaluation:

Project monitoring and evaluation (M&E) will be conducted in line with the Country Programme Document (CPD) and the UNDAF Plus. The Project Board will be in charge of overall project oversight. The Board will hold regular meetings to discuss the project implementation and assess its progress. The Results and Resources Framework (RRF) incorporated in this document will be the touchstone for performance monitoring and reporting. The Government of The Gambia and UNDP will be responsible for setting up the necessary M&E mechanisms (see further below) in order to ensure continuous M&E of the project's results and impact, as well as to ensure efficient resource utilization, accountability, transparency and integrity.

M&E Plan

Tracking the achievement of planned results for each activity within the annual work plan and reporting progress to the Project Board and giving feedback to the implementing partners will be the responsibility of the Project Manager via an M&E Plan. The Project Manager, in collaboration with the Project Board will ensure that selected implementing partners will develop a results-based monitoring plan. The plan will have gender-sensitive SMART indicators, which will facilitate effective monitoring. The Project Manager will provide semi-annual reports to the Project Board or as often the Board requires as.

The specific mechanisms that will be used to monitor the achievement of results will include:

- Semi-annual progress and financial reports, prepared by the Project Manager for review by the Project Board; a standard reporting format will be used;
- Annual progress report, technical and financial report prepared by the annual work plan implementing agency and/or the ERP Atlas system at the end of the year;
- At the end of 'Year 1' a Mid-Term Assessment will take place, which will include lessons learned exercise and documenting good practices; this report will be presented to the Project Board for consideration and action. A final independent review will take place at the end of the Project;
- Semi-annual meetings of the Project Review Board will be convened to review progress reports and to ensure the Project results are achieved and where necessary, recommend a change in implementation strategy. The Project Review Board's Executive will report to the Resident Coordinator post each semi-annual meeting;
- A final report will be prepared by UNDP, which includes lessons learned and good practices, within 3 months of the end of the Project and submitted for review and consideration by the Project Review Board.

The project will be subject to an independent evaluation to be done in consultation with PBSO before its closure and a budget of up to a maximum of about 5% of total budget will be set aside for this exercise.

Background

In The Gambia, during the past 22 years of authoritarian regime, justice institutions were systematically manipulated to preserve the oppressive regime in power. There was constant interference and arbitrary removal of independent-minded judges by the Executive. Consequently, there is limited public confidence in the judiciary, as former President Jammeh dispensed crude justice by throwing opponents in prison, and often determining publicly their sentences. The perception of judiciary was further worsened by the role played by the judiciary in trying to extend the President's tenure after he rejected the presidential election result last year. While most of the court system and justice institution exist, their role and capacity has been undermined under the past regime.⁶

The new Government is under pressure to urgently meet the aspirations of the Gambian people for justice. To address the grievances of the Gambians of human rights violations experienced under the former regime, there is an urgent need to the design of a National Transitional Justice Strategy and the, establishment and implementation of transitional justice mechanisms. At the same time, the justice sector is underfunded and suffering from a lack of physical facilities and human resources.⁷ Justice delivery has been slow and perceived unfair, and consequently there has been a marked deficit in access to justice for the population. No state support mechanism or legal aid services are available for victims, and only limited legal aid services are available for defendants. While the former regime built an abusive state security apparatus as a main means for repression, the role of the Gambia Police Force in charge of internal security service and as a key institution of the criminal justice system was undermined. Consequently, the Gambia Police Force lacks adequate quantity and quality of human resources as well as scientific training and equipment for criminal investigation, which is a major impediment to access to justice and fair justice service delivery.

Building an inclusive and effective justice system based on rule of law and human rights is a key element for a stable democracy and sustaining peace in The Gambia – and the realization of SDG 16 - promoting a peaceful and inclusive society for sustainable development, providing access to justice for all and build effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels. Legal reform as well as reform and capacity building of the justice system is imperative to re-establish standards and procedures, to enhance the capacity, accountability and oversight of the judiciary and justice institutions in line with basic principles of independence of the judiciary, to ensure fair justice service delivery to all Gambians, and to deal with the past and address grievances and prepare the future to build democracy based on rule of law and human rights.

The United Nations are supporting the Government of The Gambia to undertake justice and security sector reforms, strengthen rule of law of law and enhance justice and security service delivery through a sector-wide project. Solution for improved access to justice will be piloted at regional level; capacities of key justice actors will be strengthened and coordination mechanisms will be put in place to ensure sector-wide planning of the reform process strengthening the rule of law and justice service delivery to all Gambians. Background

As a direct result of 22 years of authoritarian rule, rule of law institutions in the Gambia face significant challenges. During those years, social stability was maintained through state force and coercion. As a result, Gambians were routinely subjected to harassment, arbitrary arrest, torture and extrajudicial executions, in a climate of total impunity.

Human rights violations were reported to be widespread and the UN, a number of NGOs and human rights defenders have documented such alleged violations. In most cases, there was no effective investigation and perpetrators have not been brought to justice.

Although the Constitution of The Gambia provides for independence of the judiciary, the Gambian judiciary under the former government was subject to various forms of interference. Consequently, there is limited public confidence in the judiciary. In addition, justice delivery has been slow, and there has been a marked deficit in access to justice.

To address the grievances of the Gambians of human rights violations experienced under the former regime, the current Gambian government is seeking urgent assistance in designing of a National Strategy for Transitional Justice and in establishing and implementing transitional justice mechanisms. In addition, the criminal justice system requires reform and capacity building. The new government in The Gambia has also resolved to improve the country's human resources capacity, its constitutional, legal and institutional framework, as well as the quality of its strategies, policies and programs, in order to consolidate democracy and comply with international human rights standards.
