Situation Analysis

Youth Employment and Empowerment is a key factor in the development and stability of Sierra Leone. With an estimated 800,000 youths (15-24 years) activity searching for employment, youth unemployment cannot be ignored or undervalued. To significantly increase employment requires a change in the policy frameworks, such as the macro-economic policy, support to private sector development and education, in combination with investments in micro and small business development and labour intensive public works. Sierra Leone has very low human capital and youth are generally not prepared with the requisite skills for employment. The average number of completed-years of education of youth in Sierra Leone is half that of India, one third of China and a fourth of South East Asia. Approximately half of the youth population in Sierra Leone is illiterate. Overall, youth have had little connection to the formal economy and lack relevant life skills. Youth employment is a high priority of the Government. It has created a new Ministry with the direct responsibility for youth employment, the Ministry of Youth Employment and Sports (MYES), and the National Youth Commission (NAYCOM) which will provide overall leadership on youth employment and empowerment. UNDP works directly with these two bodies to provide leadership on youth employment and youth empowerment.

A UN-sponsored conference (December 2011) on youth employment made the following observations on the youth employment situation in Sierra Leone.

- Creating employment opportunities for youth depends on the growth of the overall economy
- There is a lack of clarity in the definitions used concerning jobs/employment, and there is lack of basic data
- There is a serious lack of analytical work concerning which sectors and sub-sectors could generate the highest labour demand and what policies should be pursued to encourage investment/projects in these areas
- Sharing of experience and best practices is still very rudimentary
- Youth programmes aimed at generating sustainable livelihood opportunities must address both the supply and demand side of the labour market increasing the employability of young people while generating a stronger demand for youth in the labour market. On the supply side it is critical to improve the quality and relevance of training. On the demand side, public works schemes are effective at increasing the short-term demand for labour. But they can also create longer-term employment opportunities if they provide skills training and if public works projects are bundled into small contracts for management by small enterprises

The programme will provide coherence in policy and support to employment-projects; coordination at the practical level to indentify and disseminate lessons learned; the development of employment-services on a national scale. In so doing, the project will build the necessary implementation environment for employment-creating projects to be successful.

Strategies, including lessons learned, and the proposed programme

The DAO funds will support two components of the Programme

Component: Youth Employment through Micro & Small Business Development

Micro & Small Businesses are one of the main mechanisms for youth employment in the Sierra Leone economy. The project will provide support through three main interventions: - 1). The development of supportive polices e.g. taxation on commotions such as solar equipment; 2) the establishment of support services that will mentor the youth to successfully start-up and operate their own business and 3) support to 1,000 youth to successful operate their own enterprise.

Component strategy:

The component strategy has three elements:

- Support to establishment of Enterprise Development Service in each district. EDS providers and mentors will be recruited to provide training and support to start-up and existing youth-led businesses
- 2) Support provided to1,000 youth to develop a sustainable income through the development of micro/very small enterprises in innovative projects based on lessons learned The interventions will be delivered by specially selected implementing partners.
- 3) Establish Careers advice and placement services: This service has been established in 2 universities. It will expanded to all the universities and eventually, to all the Technical and Vocational Training institution (TVET) and secondary schools. In 2012 there will be careers advice available in the four universities campuses, 9 TVET centres and one careers advice session in the 130 senior secondary schools.

With the DAO funds the targets are:

- Enterprise Service Support Centers established and operational in all the districts, providing business skills training and business start-up mentoring to youth-led MSEs
- 20 youth-serving NGOs are trained in providing business development skills training and business start-up mentoring support to youth-led MSEs
- 1,000 youth engaged in their own enterprises
- 13 Career Advice and Placement Services (CAPS) operational in 4 university campuses and 9
   TVET Colleges

- Careers advice sessions in each senior secondary school
- 50 university graduates in graduate-employment scheme
- 200 youth in internship

Component: Youth Empowerment:

Youth are very sensitive about their inclusion in decisions that directly affect their lives. Most often they are frustrated at their sense of exclusion. With the Presidential and Parliamentary Elections scheduled for 2012, the need for the positive engagement of youth is critical. The objective of this component is to create an effective national framework for the engagement of youth for peace consolidation. This component will build structures and capacity of the youth to have effective engagement in decision-making at the Chiefdom and District levels and in the targeting of projects that are designed to work with the youth.

Component Strategy:

The structures that enable the youth to be represented in decision- making will be strengthened. Led by the District Youth Officer the Chiefdom and District Youth Councils will be strengthened through awareness initiatives to the adult leadership at theses two levels and the training of the youth in such skills and issues as leadership, decision making, democracy and governance structures and systems. The national media will be used to give the youth the opportunity to broadcast their perceptions of issues that directly affect their lives

The programme will support the engagement of 2,000 youth in the physical improvement of sports fields in their own localities (in Freetown, Bo, Makeni and Kenema) and the capacity development to mage the maintenance and on-going use of the sports faculties. The City Councils will facilitate the youth who use the sports facilities to the facilities for improvement.

The programme will partner with NGOs experienced in working with youth groups and youth-led projects to assist the youth to carry out the physical improvements; manage the ongoing maintenance of the facility and organize the manage the daily use of the facility by the youth. Youth will receive training in basic literacy, life skills development and employability.

With the DAO funds the targets are:

- 500 youth trained in leadership skills, peacebuilding, conflict management, and peer-to-peer mediation
- 2,000 youth involved in improving their own sports facilities and involved in local decisionmaking.
- 50 community sports facilities upgraded by youth in Freetown, Bo, Kenema & Makeni.
