Project Title: Building Trust and Confidence among people, communities and authorities. (Part 1, PPP Outcome 1)	Recipient UN Organization(s): UNHCR
Project Contact: Johann P. Siffointe Address: UNHCR, UN House, 160 Chui Ave, Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan Telephone: +996312611264 E-mail: siffoint@unhcr.org	Implementing Partner(s): TBD after UNHCR's competitive IP selection process (Jan 2014)
Project Number: (To be completed by UNDP MPTF Office)	Project Location: Osh, Kyrgyzstan
Project Description: UNHCR's project focuses on one of the most important outstanding issue that hinders the peacebuilding process in the Kyrgyz Republic, the lack of trust both between people and the authorities, and among diverse communities. Often, people do not address the official feedback mechanisms in case a grievance occurs but rather take the law into their own hands which potential causes new grievances or even violent outbreaks. UNHCR, in close cooperation with government partners (LSGA and Ombudsman's Office) and civil society leaders, will capacitate local self-government bodies to actively attend to people's complaints, analyze reasons and find adequate solutions	Total Project Cost: $1,424,246 Peacebuilding Fund: $1,424,246 UNDP BCPR TTF: - Government Input: - Other:- Total: $1,424,246

¹ The PBSO monitors the inclusion of women and girls in all PBF projects in line with SC Resolutions 1325, 1612, 1888, 1889.

² PBF specific outcome areas: 1 Security Sector Reform; 2 Rule of Law; 3 (DD)R; 4 Political dialogue for Peace Agreements; 5. National reconciliation; 6. Democratic governance; 7. Management of natural resources (including land); 8. Short-term employment generation; 9. Sustainable livelihoods; 10. Public administration; and 11. Public service delivery (including infrastructure)

Project Outputs and Key Activities: At the core of UNHCR's project lays the establishment/improvement of feedback mechanisms on the local level. The office will set up those mechanisms in at least 20 Ayl-Okmotos/Territorial Councils in the three southern Oblasts (Batken, Osh, and Jalalabad). In order to strengthen the problem solving capacity of local self-government bodies, UNHCR will provide assistance in at least 60 individual cases. This assistance will include every step, from addressing the claim until its final resolution. Thereby, positive precedents of successful and efficient problem by the authorities will be collected. Furthermore, UNHCR will in at least 20 locations provide funding to and ensure sound implementation of peacebuilding initiatives/small to medium scale projects. The projects will address specific grievances in communities, which, if not adequately resolved, could potentially cause new conflict. The small-scale projects will be identified during the feedback mechanism's dialogue between local self-government bodies and the communities. In addition, UNHCR will constantly monitor (jointly with LSGA and the Ombudsman's Office) the situation the areas of intervention and provide reports/recommendation to the national government.

1. Background

1.1. Key Challenges and Critical Peacebuilding Needs

In the conflict affected areas and its surroundings in south Kyrgyzstan, the situation remains calm but fragile as the negative effects and memories of the conflict linger deep in the society. For example, the rhetoric of ethnicity, which was used to polarize people during the June 2010 conflict, continues to cast the shadow in people's relationships three years after the conflict. At the core of this 'fragility' lays mistrust – between diverse and often polarized communities and between people and authorities. UNHCR's monitoring efforts since 2010, as described in PBNA, clearly point towards this factor of conflict. In addition, UNHCR has conducted a perception study¹ in 2013 which also identified the lack of trust to be the most prominent factor that is preventing reconciliation and peacebuilding.

Mistrust between ethnically diverse communities is another critical challenge for reconciliation and peacebuilding. Both Uzbek and Kyrgyz communities fear each other as there has been no meaningful reconciliation process. The rule of law is not applied adequately and the authorities are viewed to be acting with impunity and without impartiality. Such a persistent and widespread situation of mistrust results in escalations of small street fights or minor problems between communities into violent incidents involving a huge number of individuals and even whole communities. Whenever people face a problem or dispute, they tend not to ask for a peaceful and/or lawful solution through interventions by the authorities, especially the police. Neither do people address the official feedback mechanisms or other oversight entities. Instead, problems are often solved by people themselves, resorting to physical violence, extortion of money, and bribing authorities which further fosters corruption and impunity and, in turn, undermines the rule of law. Similarly, when encountering discrimination/harassment by authorities and the police, those who are subjected, including men, women, elderly, youth and minorities, tend not to report such incidents further.

Women play a key role in the peacebuilding process as they may lay the root for a renewal of trust between ethnically diverse communities. In many of these communities, women are involved in problem solving processes since many men, who, in the past, were the traditional decision makers, migrated to the Russian Federation and other countries mainly for economic reasons.

1.2. Donor Mapping and Gap Analysis

As stated in the Donor Mapping and Gap Analysis table (Annex 1), there are seven main donors funding activities of different agencies for implementation of different kind of projects. While some of the projects are country wide, the majority of them are implemented in the southern provinces of Kyrgyzstan with a focus on provision of training on human rights, rule of law, governance, expertise, building technical capacity, trial monitoring in courts and human rights field monitoring. Other projects focus on research, drafting of laws and regulations, making recommendations, capacity building of the local police, implementation of small scale projects, mediation and prevention of conflict at the local level. While the above activities have contributed to the improvement of the overall situation in the south, the safety and security incidents are not adequately addressed. There are regular reports of incidents of inter-ethnic tensions and border issues, though on the small scale. This keeps the situation in a 'fragile' state. Some 135 localized safety and security incidents were recorded through UNHCR's protection monitoring between 2012 and the mid-2013. It has been assessed that a minor incident which takes an inter-ethnic tone can spread to other areas unless they are handled by authorities with conflict sensitivity. The nature of those incidents is mixed. Some relate to relationships between communities, others are inter-personal and probably related to criminal activities.

Trust and confidence building among the communities of different ethnic group, the people and the local authorities is not covered by any of the above mentioned project. Therefore, UNHCR's project fills a significant gap within the peacebuilding efforts undertaken by other agencies in the south.

2. Project Concept and Theory of Change

2.1. Relevance to Peacebuilding

¹ UNHCR Osh: Perception Study. Views of people in conflict affected and surrounding areas in Southern Kyrgyzstan, Osh 2013.

The negative cycle of mistrust makes the conflict-affected and surrounding areas perpetually fragile, open to manipulations and unable to reach durable solutions in the aftermath of conflict. Furthermore, this negative cycle delays any progress towards peacebuilding in the entire country. One of the key destabilizing factors in southern Kyrgyzstan is the sense of insecurity felt by the population. Such insecurity is stemming from inter-ethnic tensions both at the community and national levels, unequal application of the rule of law, inadequate protection of the right holders, and mistrust and lack of confidence in the local authorities including police.

Since there have been no formal efforts towards a peace and reconciliation process, PRF offers a significant opportunity to tackle deep-rooted issues that stem from past conflicts, including insufficient reconciliation and the lack of human security. PRF has the opportunity to strengthen vital components of the foundation for peace in Kyrgyzstan such as protection of human rights, structural reforms and legislative changes. As described in the National Sustainable Development Strategy, it is critical, at this juncture, to make a concerted effort to tackle the deep-rooted issues of mistrust and build further on reconciliation.² UNHCR's project capitalizes on the opportunity offered by the PRF in presenting positive examples of trust building among communities and between people and authorities in the aftermath of conflict.

Within Kyrgyzstan's PPP, the project will contribute to outcome 1 and 2. Outcome 2 will be addressed by strengthening conflict resolution capacity of local authorities and law enforcement agencies while empowering citizens to claim protection of their rights and accountability of authorities. Furthermore, advocacy capacities of local NGOs will be enhanced. The project will also feed into the outcome 1 by increasing accountability and responsibility of authorities, including the police, to solve incidents with sensitivity for conflict and the importance of human rights. In addition, the project will foster a reflection process on the lessons-learned, which may lead to national policy-making and legislative changes. The project will have an overarching impact on the reduction of fragility in southern Kyrgyzstan.

In general, the notion of reconciliation encompasses social and structural transformation which goes beyond the 2010 conflict. In order to reduce fear in the future that may result in human displacement, many of those insecurity factors must be addressed in the short-term. This demonstration of positive changes will help to increase human security and provide a basis for reconciliation and peacebuilding. In the context of Kyrgyzstan, by and large, the existing problems are commonly understood by various stakeholders from the government to international organizations.³ At the same time, UNHCR considers that the articulation of the strategic direction in creating an environment conducive for sustainable reintegration, that is durable solutions for the conflict and displacement affected population, realizing that human security in a short, mid and long term still requires more work.⁴ In this sense, UNHCR's relevance may be found in building up tangible positive examples of human security that are needed to reduce and conflict susceptibility.

The project addresses several peacebuilding challenges identified in the PPP. It will strengthen the capacity of state institutions to implement and deliver services, support state institutions to engage more in preventing and resolving conflicts and promote accountability and respect for the rule of law and human rights. The main goal of the project, the improvement of trust of citizens in state institutions, is also a crucial peacebuilding challenge mentioned in the PPP. In addition, the program will assist sustainable reintegration of those who returned from displacement through its inclusive trust building approach. Therefore, the projects objectives are fully in line with the Secretary General's Decision 2011/20 on Durable Solutions for returning refugees and IDPs, for the implementation of which Kyrgyzstan has been selected as one of the three pilot countries globally.

2.2. Catalytic Effect

During and after the events of June 2010 more than 300,000 were internally displaced and 75,000 sought refuge in neighboring countries. Most of the displaced population has now returned. However, there have been no formal efforts towards a peace and reconciliation process. The PRF offers therefore a significant and much needed opportunity to further progress towards durable solutions in the aftermath of conflict. The interconnection between peacebuilding and durable

² National Council for Sustainable Development of the Kyrgyz Republic c: National Sustainable Development Strategy for the Kyrgyz Republic for the period of 2013-2017, Bishkek 2012, section 3.1.

³ For example, the Mid-Year Development plan of the government explicitly talk about the need to reduce deficit of the state budget, enhance fight against corruption, improve living standard and decrease social tension in the society. OSCE states that 'Kyrgyzstan's longer-term stability and prosperity depends on improvements in a number of key areas. These include a fair and transparent judicial, criminal justice. And law enforcement system: sounder, more inclusive inter-ethnic relations; uprooting corruption; and a closer attention to the relationship between Authorities and people, capital city and the regions'. (OSCE centre in Bishkek: Report to the Permanent Council, 19 April 2012).

⁴ Most importantly, the UN should concentrate on achieving something often discussed within the international community in Kyrgyzstan but never achieved: A common position among donors and interested nations regarding the situation and methods needed to pull the country out of a many-faceted crises. International Crisis Group, Kyrgyzstan: Widening Ethnic Divisions in the South, Asia Report No222, 29 March 2012, p. 16.

solutions is specifically evident, as without the latter a sustained and lasting peace will not be realistic. Achieving sustainable peace is also of fundamental importance, as in the last decade the South of Kyrgyzstan has experienced repeated inter-ethnic clashes, which have not been adequately addressed and consequences continue influencing the mindset of today's generation.

While the interests to support reconciliation in the conflict affected and surrounding areas are waning, it is necessary to continue efforts to increase the sense of human security by building trust between individuals and authorities and among people. This enhanced sense of human security should focus on human rights protection needs in the conflict-affected areas. Furthermore, structural reforms and legislative changes should be encouraged. The project does not seek to mobilize additional resources, but rather consolidate the previous scattered peacebuilding efforts by looking deeper into the root-causes of the conflict. It is expected that the project will have a significant catalytic effect on conflict resolution mechanisms between individuals, communities and local authorities. The establishment of a feedback and oversight body will help all members of society to address conflicts peacefully and through the due course of law instead of seeking extra-legal solutions. The conflict resolution capacity of all stakeholders will be enhanced through the project. In addition, the successful implementation of a feedback and reporting mechanism on the regional level will have a catalytic effect beyond the southern Kyrgyzstan as it will serve as a role model.

The project resonates the National Sustainable Development Strategy and Concept of Strengthening People's Unity and Interethnic Relations⁵. UNHCR's project is also closely linked to Goal 1 of the National Plan of Action on implementation of the UN Security Council Resolution 1325⁶ and Kyrgyzstan's 7 Point Action Plan as it is highly relevant to the United Nations Development Assistance Framework's Pillar A.

2.3. Theory of Change

This project is based on the theory of changes that an effective feedback mechanism which deals with significant incidents/grievances in the conflict-affected and its surrounding areas builds a foundation for peaceful conflict resolution. Furthermore, such a mechanism fosters the respect for the rule of law, and thus addresses the core peacebuilding challenge in Kyrgyzstan – the issue of deep-rooted mistrust. The project aims to accumulate positive examples of trust-building which will serve as role models for further trust building and reconciliation efforts.

In this theory of changes, people with complaints/grievances will benefit from a well-established procedure to report their concerns to and solve them with authorities without fear of reprisals, meeting their obligation as citizens. In turn, local authorities (Ayl Okmotus, Territorial Councils) including LSGA and the police will be able to deal with those crucial issues with conflict sensitivity and in accordance with the rule of law through feedback mechanisms and individual institutions. To this end, LSGs will become stronger in listening actively to concerns of populations, effectively solving problems/conflicts and providing feedbacks as well as making sure that oversight mechanisms are able to conduct monitoring and analysis of the situation in an impartial manner. Polarized and/or disputing communities will solve their problems through dialogue and implementation of problem-solving activities together with authorities. Other key actors of changes are local NGOs whose advocacy capacity will be strengthened further. Finally, national bodies will be encouraged to learn from regional examples and will offer better protection of human rights of their citizens by reflecting on those examples. This learning experience will enable national decision makers to push for legislative changes and structural reforms.

Through this cycle of trust building stimulated by UNHCR's project, positive examples will be accumulated; which will then have multiplying effects both horizontally to others in the community and vertically to policy/legislation improvements. The overarching resulting changes are expected to reduce the fragility of the current situation – where small fights or rumors can escalate into a larger more violent conflict. Changes are expected in terms of increased sense of human security among people, more accountable and conflict sensitive problem-solving approaches by authorities and ultimately better governance and legislations to deal with potential conflict triggers and protection of citizens.

3. Implementation Strategy

⁵ Government of Kyrgyzstan: Концепция укрепления единства народа и межэтнических, Bishkek 2012.

⁶ Government of Kyrgyzstan: National Action Plan on the implementation of the UN Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women and Peace and Security, Bishkek 2012.

3.1 Target Groups

The project targets four key agents of change which will be its direct beneficiaries.

1. People who live in the key target areas including Kyrgyz, Uzbek and mixed communities in particular community leaders, women, elderly and youth;
2. Local authorities including LSGs (Ayl Okmotus, Territorial Councils), and other state bodies;
3. State Agency for Local Self-Governance Affairs and Interethnic Relations (LSGAs), police, Ombudsman's office, Public Reception office of the President and the authorized representatives of the government in Osh, Jalalabad and Batken provinces; court of aksakals, youth and women councils;
4. Local NGOs;

Additionally, national decision makers will be targeted indirectly through positive examples and lessons learned which will be compiled in reports and recommendations. Each group of beneficiaries is crucial for trust building, reconciliation and peacebuilding. The feedback mechanism, one of the core components of UNHCR's project, will allow all of these groups to come together, discuss problems/concrete incidents, and work towards a joint solution. When a problem has been identified, the project allows for financial and logistical help to solve the problem through peacebuilding initiatives. This will serve as an incentive to cooperate within the feedback mechanism. In addition, individuals will be offered legal assistance in at least 60 cases to solve their concrete problem. This assistance includes a regular follow up on the case and will only conclude after the case has been finally solved.

Right now, the relationship between all key groups is fragile as mistrust prevails. Communities do not believe in the authorities' ability to solve problems and address incidents adequately, which has been clearly shown by UNHCR's perception study⁷. In addition, mistrust is a major source of conflict among diverse and polarized communities. Local NGO's will benefit from the project since their capacity to play an active role in conflict resolution and trust building will be enhanced. Local authorities and LSGAs will benefit since their sensitivity to conflict and problems of ethnically diverse communities will be enhanced. Incidents will be solved through the due course of law which will prevent grievances and even outbreaks of violence in the future.

During the design of the project, UNHCR held regular consultations with all four key target groups. They were directly involved in the project's design, and agree with its core assumptions. The early integration of stakeholders means that there is already a sense of ownership of the project which will increase further during the implementation phase. This serves as an additional incentive to cooperate and mitigates the risk of a lack of interest and motivation towards the final aim of the project: The increase of trust between all key target groups as the foundation for reconciliation and peacebuilding.

Particular attention is paid to age, gender and diversity of local population where males/females, young/elderly and those with different ethnic backgrounds experience incidents/tensions differently and play various roles in conflict resolution. For example, in some target areas, women have become a principle actor in conflict resolution as many working-age men depart on migration. In southern Kyrgyzstan women also traditionally viewed to be the head of the household and therefore represent the interests of all family members at various levels. Therefore, it is of fundamental importance for the project to engage women in all key activities and design project components towards the special needs and interests of women.

The ethnic background of people and communities affects the relationship among them and due attention is paid to interactions among those diverse and often polarized communities and people. In UNHCR's key target areas, 52-53% of the projects potential beneficiaries are female and between 39-55% are Kyrgyz, the remaining are of mainly Uzbek but also other ethnicities. UNHCR has carried out detailed analysis in all potential areas of intervention which allows picking the concrete locations carefully and according to the needs of the communities.

Quantitatively, the number beneficiaries can only be calculated roughly. The feedback mechanism will benefit every member in the community, either directly (direct assistance/problem solving) and/or indirectly (increased trust/enhanced accountability of local authorities). In addition, the project will assist at least 60 cases, from the initial stage of vocalization to the final resolution of the problem/conflict/grievance. Based on UNHCR's area research the average family consists of at least 6 members, therefore at least 360 persons will benefit directly from case assistance. The successful resolution of cases through the due course of law will result in a snowball effect and therefore benefit a greater number of individuals. Through the implementation of at least 20 peacebuilding initiatives in 20 locations, potentially every member of the community will benefit both directly and indirectly. In every of these locations women make up at least 50% of the population, in many locations the percentage is much higher. Therefore, both small scale projects and the feedback mechanism will offer tailor made solutions aimed towards the enhancement gender equality and empowerment of girls and women.

Immediately after the violent clashes of June 2010 which displaced 375.000 people, UNHCR established and lead the Protection Cluster in southern Kyrgyzstan. This cluster included consultations with all actors involved, like IDP's, refugees, civil society groups and sectoral experts and other clusters. The experience in the cluster provides the basis for UNHCR's expertise in the region. The Protection Sector, which is a successor of the Protection Cluster is remains to be an important platform for UN agencies, international and local NGOs to coordinate and ensure complementarity of protection activities in the south.

The information and data for this project proposal are based on the UNHCR Protection monitoring which is a comprehensive and systematic monitoring and analysis of human security situation in southern Kyrgyzstan, mainly focused on the 44 target areas that are affected by consequences of the conflict and displacement. These 44 target areas are located in Osh, Jalal-Abad and Batken provinces and were divided to 'red' and 'yellow' zones. Protection monitoring was carried out in 22 high risk ('red') and 22 medium risk ('yellow') areas. The definition of these parameters is explained in the footnote.⁸ Information is collected in relation to four key benchmarks (criteria)⁹;

⁸ High Risk (red): access including coverage and functionality; proximities to the borders; conflict affected areas (burnt, looted, business affected); the nature and level of threats to human security (such as political instability, unfair treatment of the minorities by the authorities, harassment, extortion and arbitrary arrests) and level of trust/confidence in law enforcement bodies; origin (place of residence) presumed/referred origin of threat to human security (especially political instability, daily incidents exacerbating to inter-ethnic tension) by non-authorities, non-law enforcement bodies; Medium Risk (yellow): access including coverage and functionality, proximities to the borders, effects of participation in the June 2010 events; origin (place

- (a) Safety and security,
- (b) Housing, land and property,
- (c) Documentation, and
- (d) Adequate standards of living and livelihoods.

The key target areas are defined on the analysis of conflict-susceptibility, using UNHCR, other agencies and government data and also UNHCR has analyzed these conflict affected and its surroundings areas. 12 clusters (or 31 areas) are identified as having consistent issues in terms of relationship between the communities, safety and security, HLP rights and access to livelihood. All above mentioned locations¹⁰ were covered by UNHCR Protection monitoring.

Among other locations, there were more registered issues linked to inter-ethnic tensions between representatives of different ethnic groups, unresolved HLP problems that could potentially trigger future conflicts like disputes between different communities over natural resources (e.g. irrigation water). These problems could cause a growing of intolerance towards different cultures and languages in the future. Most importantly, these communities suffer from a lack of trust between each other. At the same time, the lack of the functioning feedback mechanisms diminishes trust towards local authorities including local police as well as other state bodies.

UNHCR has detailed and updated Location Analysis papers for all three provinces, including all 44 target areas (Ayl Okmotu and Cities) with detailed protection findings. These findings will be used for UNHCR's peace building project as a resource for area selection justification and the identification of feasible intervention strategies. Locations were selected mostly from "Red zone" areas which are constantly monitored by UNHCR Protection Unit.

The detailed data and insights that UNHCR used in order to determine the most appropriate areas of intervention guarantees for effective and swift implementation of the project in locations with the greatest peacebuilding needs.

3.3 Description of activities and Implementation Approaches

The project combines bottom-up and top-down approaches. While the project builds upon UNHCR's engagement in the conflict affected and its surrounding areas in the past three years, an innovative approach is taken by focusing on thorough follow-up and review of feedback and conflict resolution mechanisms from the on-set of claims to their solutions, working closely both with people and the authorities. Another critical component of the project is conducting of joint situation monitoring and systematic analysis with oversight entities, including LSGAs, and a systematic linkage of the project to national-level legislative changes/reforms. The project focuses on crucial incidents/grievances related to safety and security, house, land and property rights and adequate access to livelihoods.

In the key target areas UNHCR, its partners and the LSGA will:

1. Enable individuals to file incidents/grievances with authorities and the police with legal assistance and follow-up closely on cases throughout conflict resolution processes
2. Mobilize target communities for open dialogues and conflict resolution by implementing community mobilization projects and peacebuilding initiatives involving authorities, community leaders, elderly courts, women/youths councils and other 'peace' actors, a specific emphasize will be put on women and their integration in dialogue and conflict resolution processes, additionally, a number of peacebuilding initiatives will specifically focus on gender equality
3. Involve local self-governing bodies in the establishment/improvement of feedback mechanisms which will include elements of active-listening, feedback and information dissemination and coaching the oversight entities, such as ombudsman's office and LSGA in order to strengthen their monitoring, intervention and follow-up capacities, additionally joint monitoring and analysis of incidents and conflict resolution processes will be conducted;

¹⁰ 8 Ayl Okmotu, 1 town and Jalalabad city in Jalalabad province, 3 Ayl Okmotu, 1 town and Osh city in Osh province, 4 Ayl Okmotu and 1 town in Batken province.

4. UNHCR will work with a minimum of two local NGOs in those activities above (to be determined), strengthening their advocacy capacity at the local and national levels;
5. Reflect on systematic analysis and lessons-learned of accumulated cases and share capacity-building activities with national-level legislative in order to realize structural changes in close collaboration with other UN agencies;
6. Lead design and conducting of perception studies every six months, together with other agencies, in order to measure changes in people's perception and the overall success of the project, using an analytical software (such as 'SenseMaker') as well as conducting of periodical surveys on internal and external migration and the reasons behind it;
7. Share information, coordinate activities with other actors (UN agencies in particular) and follow up on issues that require further advocacy through the Protection Working group meetings.

The sequencing of the activities focuses first on the bottom-up process of creating positive examples. Following-up on each incidents/cases/issues will be carried out throughout the project period but the majority of cases/issues are expected to be identified during the first 12 months of the project. Community mobilization activities for open dialogues and conflict resolution will be also intensively carried out at the beginning of the project period to identify cases and issues requiring intervention and follow up. Therefore, the few months of the project will be spent in mapping and organization of feedback and conflict resolution mechanisms in a tangible way with the stakeholders and setting up a collaboration system which will include all relevant actors. This will then allow conducting a joint monitoring and analysis as a basis for further project activities.

UNHCR will render its support to persons of concern through local NGOs. These IP's will, in addition to the provided support, receive coaching on the objectives of the project such as conflict resolution, advocacy, and situation monitoring and community mobilization. These NGOs will provide legal assistance and counseling on the most conflict sensitive cases, which will create instances of impartial and fair solution of conflicts through national protection mechanisms. We do expect that at least 60 cases will be filed by people to relevant state bodies. The legal aid will take different forms, including oral/written consultations, accompaniment to relevant state bodies and even court representation on the most crucial legal cases as an example of strategic litigation processes.

Partner NGOs will be directly engaged in conducting open dialogues and conflict resolution activities through community mobilization and small scale projects. Open dialogues will be organized through joint discussion of conflict situations raised by people/communities involving authorities, community leaders, elderly courts, women/youths councils and other 'peace' actors to find the optimal resolution of the disputes. Through the course of collectively identifying the priority issues and designing the peacebuilding initiatives, special attention will be paid to involvement of women and youth as well as other vulnerable groups (e.g. disabled individual or migrants).

UNHCR will work directly with local authorities (LSGs, police and oversight agencies including Ombudsman, LSGA, and authorized representatives of the Government), provide coaching on monitoring/analysis of the situation and helping them to establish feedback mechanisms. Specifically, UNHCR will support twenty local authorities with the establishment/improvement of feedback mechanisms at the Ayil Okmotu/Territorial Council level. These mechanisms will include facilities for open dialogues/discussions with the all parties of the conflict, ad hoc gathering and discussions of the cases/issues with the key stakeholders. In addition, the feedback mechanism will allow for the provision and sharing of information on conflicts/grievances. The mechanism will offer advice and guidance to committee members which work under the LSGA, district level officials and representatives relevant government institutions. The decision will be communicated by relevant officials to concerned individuals/communities. UNHCR, together with its partners, will establish horizontal connections and cooperation mechanisms among LSGs, oversight bodies and civil society organizations on local level for rapid and effective solution of issues and complaints raised by members of concerned communities.

UNHCR will support the three oversight mechanisms at the level of Osh, Jalalabad and Batken provinces composed of the representatives of the LSGs, LSGA, Ombudsman and the Public Reception office of the President and authorized representatives of the Government. The LSGA representatives as well as Ombudsman offices will be part of joint situation monitoring and analysis, in addition to follow-up activities on previously identified cases and issues. At the Ayil Okmotu/Territorial Council level, situation monitoring will be conducted by UNHCR, partner NGOs, and district LSGA officials, while at the level of province it will be conducted by the provincial officials of the oversight bodies (LSGA, Ombudsman, Public Reception office of the President and the authorized representatives of the Government), UNHCR and its IPs.

The second phase of the project will mostly focus on advocacy. During this phase the work on feedback mechanisms will continue. All collected systematic analysis and lessons-learned of accumulated cases, as well as the results of perception studies, will be reflected in local and national policy-making and legislative changes.

Continuing its current protection sector coordination work, UNHCR will organize the Protection Working Group meetings on monthly basis to share information, experiences, coordinate activities and agree on advocacy activities with its members. Members of the protection working group will include the UN agencies present in the south, international organizations such as OSCE, Safer World and local NGOs that are involved in the implementation of peacebuilding projects and activities. Relevant outcomes will be brought to the attention of the UNCT for advises and follow up with the authorities at the national level through JSC.

Since changes of perception are the most significant aspect, UNHCR will conduct a full perception study in all areas of intervention in the beginning and at the end of the project. These studies will build on the previous experiences. In between, after 8 and 15 months, smaller perception studies, accompanied the roundtables that include all stakeholders, will be carried out in selected areas. This will help to continuously monitor the projects progress. In addition, it is planned that four migration surveys are going to be carried out. These surveys will investigate the reasons behind the migration processes in the south since migration can also be a result of insecurity and is not only connected to economic needs. While conducting these surveys, UNHCR will approach different organizations, such as IOM and "Central Asia in a movement" regional platform (DCA). Four lessons learned and situation analysis will be conducted and the results used for advocacy through protection sector coordination.

A participatory nature of the project means that consultations with communities include focus group discussions and individual interviews that are based on UNHCR's Age and Gender Diversity Mainstream Criteria¹¹ which address specific needs of women/men across different ages and diversities. As the project focuses on the mono and multi ethnic communities, a balanced approach is ensured, involving diverse range of communities where incidents occurs and problems arises, hence ensuring 'do no harm' approach. Special attention is paid to issues/problems/grievances encountered by women and follow-up to their complaints. This will help to raise awareness of these women specific issues and enhance the standing of women in the reconciliation and peacebuliding process. For this purpose the project allocates approximately 16% of the total budget.

The project aims to provide tailor made solutions for each location and case. The project envisages that a joint collaboration system is established including UN and other international agencies, local authorities, LSGA, Ombudsman's office, local NGOs and other representatives of the communities. The project will be supported by an international consultant. A minimum of two local NGOs, which will be selected following UNHCR's IP selection procedure and in close cooperation with government partners, will be responsible to provide legal assistance and community mobilization, under the overall guidance of the UNHCR Office.

UNHCR staff will be responsible for follow-up of cases, monitoring, coaching and advocacy. Three national UNVs will supplement UNHCR staff and especially assist in monitoring activities. UNHCR programme and protection teams will support the implementation of the project and undertakes all the relevant project monitoring. The project will be implemented under the direct supervision of the Head of UNHCR Sub-Office Osh.

3.4. Sustainability, Exit Strategy and Replicability

The project is designed to stay, even after UNHCR will downgrade its operation in the south of Kyrgyzstan in the course of 2016. Through a broad consultation process, all relevant stakeholders have been part of the development of the project. This involvement will continue during implementation and help to build sustainable results. In addition, the project is split up into different phases in which the responsibility for the projects components is shifted from UNHCR to civil society and government partners. In addition, the feedback mechanism, which is the key component of the project, is expected to be replicated in other regions of Kyrgyzstan. The successful implementation of UNHCR's project and a measurable increase of trust between government agencies, communities and individuals, will serve as a role model for other regions in the south of Kyrgyzstan and beyond. The project includes four measures to ensure sustainability:

¹¹ UNHCR: Age, Gender and Diversity Policy. Working with people and communities for equality and protection, Geneva 2011. (<http://www.unhcr.org/4e7757449.html>)

1. The project was developed in close consultation with all relevant partners. Instead of imposing an idea, a collaborative approach has been applied which will result in a sense of ownership by all stakeholders.
2. The project is separated in two phases. During the phase, the feedback mechanism and conflict resolution initiatives will be set up, while during the second year the focus shifts towards advocacy and capacity building while efforts to implement the feedback mechanisms continue. Local NGOs will be gradually empowered to take more responsibility, and eventually substitute UNHCR's role in the project, namely to provide assistance in running the feedback mechanism and assist people to make their specific cases heard. Local authorities and oversight bodies will be trained and encourage to eventually keep the core components alive after the initial 27 month of the project.
3. Successful implementation of the project will function as a show case for trust building, inclusive decision making and conflict resolution. Once institutionalized, all key target groups will be interested to keep the project running. The cost for the feedback mechanisms is relatively low which will allow for continuation after the initial 27 month of the project.
4. The collective problem solving mechanism will allow key target groups to apply for additional funding from third parties in order to finance conflict resolution initiatives independently from PRF funding. UNHCR will provide training on fund raising and donor acquisition.

One component of the project is the compilation of best practices and lessons learned reports which will be shared with national decision makers through the UNCT and the JSC. The positive example for effective and functioning trust building of feedback mechanism in selected located in the south will motivate other communities to employ similar measures. The capacity building efforts by UNHCR which are aimed towards all key target groups will empower these groups to share their experience and assist other communities in setting up inclusive feedback mechanism and trust building and conflict resolution mechanisms.

3.5 Cost Efficiency

See Annex 2.

3.6. Risk Management

Risk	Likelihood (high, medium low)	Severity of impact on project (high, medium, low)	Mitigating Strategy
Deterioration of security situation due to major political events or incidents	Medium	High	Activities will be adjusted to minimize risks to the project implementers, stakeholders, beneficiaries and partners, while providing assistance in resolving conflicts, supporting the peacemakers and aiding those affected by this possible renewed violence
Lack of genuine commitment from authorities to work collaboratively on the projects objectives; existence of the peace spoilers	Medium	Medium	Wider participation of personnel, population, identification and empowerment of enablers that foster a sense of ownership

Unwillingness or misunderstanding of duty bearers	Medium	Medium	Engagement and follow up with various stakeholders, constant inclusion of all stakeholders in project activities
Perceived focus of activities on minorities	Medium	Medium	Joint conflict analysis with authorities as well as taking a balanced approach in selecting locations and cases that ensures that all ethnic groups will benefit equally from the project

The main risk to the implementation of project activities is a significant deterioration of the security situation in the region. The project mitigates this very risk since it will contribute to the reduction of major violent conflicts in Kyrgyzstan and make a significant contribution to peace-building. However, the overall stability and security situation in the country must still be considered to be beyond the control of the project. The most probable cause of a breakdown of security in the target areas would be some large political events: major demonstrations and protests of citizens, organized by opposition; elections of Mayor of Osh city and the Parliamentary Elections in 2015. Elections in Kyrgyzstan are usually accompanied by many of incidents and provocations, both during the campaign period and on the day of elections. The elections for Osh Mayor in 2014 may also bring instability in southern regions if the current Mayor will not be assigned for the new term. The new parliament will establish a new Government, which means the following staff changes on different levels. However, these events should not occur before 2016, after completion of the project. The mitigation strategy will orient towards maximum advocacy efforts to be accomplished prior to elections to the Parliament.

In the event of a deteriorating security situation, the immediate response would be to adjust activities to minimize risks to the project implementers, stakeholders, beneficiaries and partners, while providing assistance in resolving conflicts, supporting the peacemakers and aiding those affected by this possible violence. UNHCR and local partners, through their ongoing presence in the region, will be well positioned to monitor, analyze, and share information regarding existing and emerging conflict potentials.

UNHCR will promote activities of partners/stakeholders in the field of conflict sensitive planning and assist in implementing activities. UNHCR will also establish accessible complaint mechanism for target groups/beneficiaries as a part of feedback mechanism on project activities and interventions.

Another possible risk includes both the lack of genuine commitments from authorities and the existence of peace spoilers among population. Their impacts are assessed as medium. The mitigating strategy includes wider participation among personnel and population, identification and empowerment of enablers which will create an overall sense of ownership. A medium likelihood risk and impact is unwillingness and misunderstanding of duty bearers such as law enforcement agencies. UNHCR has a long standing cooperation with the key stakeholders at local levels, as well as other agencies such as OSCE working with them. The project's government counterparts will also be engaged with follow-up with various stakeholders as part of the mitigating strategy. There is always medium likelihood and impact risks of the project perceived as being focusing mainly on minorities or biased. In order to reduce such a perception, the project contains joint conflict analysis with authorities as well as taking a balanced approach in selecting locations and cases.

3.7 Results Framework and M&E Systems

The Result framework can be found in Annex 3. The project will help to achieve PPP outcomes 1 and 2 by increasing trust between individuals, diverse communities and local authorities through an effective feedback mechanism, peace building initiatives and individual assistance for right holders. The will increase the accountability of duty bearers and offer significant opportunities for reconciliation in southern Kyrgyzstan.

The M&E System includes, among other measures, biannual progress updates, the conduction of baseline assessment and external final project evaluation. The total M&E budget is $ 65,000. In addition to traditional M&E measures, the project will be monitored through four perception studies that will enable UNHCR to measure the increase of trust. For more details refer to Annex 4.

3. Management Arrangement and Partnership

4.1 Implementation Capacity and Comparative Advantage

UNHCR currently operates in Bishkek, Osh, Jalalabad and Batken provinces (with Sub Office in Osh, Field Unit office in Jalalabad and Satellite Office in Batken). The activities focus on sustainable reintegration of conflict affected communities which help to reduce the potential risks of future displacement through advocacy and tangible confidence-building activities. UNHCR works currently in and around conflict-affected areas, engaging with people and the authorities in 44 locations in three provinces of southern Kyrgyzstan (Ayl Okmotu and towns located in 11 districts and cities of Osh and Jalalabad). The concerned communities were mobilized to identify issues of concern. People and the authorities worked together to find remedial measures through dialogue and joint action. Previously, UNHCR helped communities with the reconstruction of some 1,600 houses destroyed as a result of June, 2010, inter-ethnic conflict. In addition, 211 small-scale community-based projects were implemented under IRF 1. During implementation of community-based projects, UNHCR ensured to put people at the center of decision making as well as supporting their capacities and efforts to have their rights recognized. UNHCR also worked on the promotion of the role of women and men of all ages and backgrounds as agents of positive social change in their own families and communities. The pilot initiative of creation of feedback mechanism in the form of establishment of Dialogue Centers in Jalalabad city and Osh city in late 2012 helped UNHCR gain an expertise necessary to allow for swift, successful and sustainable implementation of the project. Due to the long standing engagement of UNHCR in the south, local authorities, individuals and communities consider UNHCR as reliable partner for peacebuilding.

UNHCR conducted an extensive perception study in the potential target areas at the end of 2012. A joint conflict analysis was conducted with its sister agencies and NGOs. The project's theory of change was developed through discussions with the authorities and NGOs. UNHCR chairs protection sector coordination in south Kyrgyzstan, participants of which containing mostly from UN Agencies and local and International NGO's. This project is intended to be linked closely to activities of IOM, OHCHR, UNDP, UNICEF and UN women.

UNHCR is working closely with the local NGOs and authorities since June 2010, when it started providing emergency assistance to the conflicted affected population, returning refugees and IDPs. During this time, local NGOs were provided with training on protection monitoring, community mobilization, conflict analysis, provision of legal aid and participatory assessment. In order to reduce the level of clashes and conflict particularly over the use of resources, the UNHCR, together with the authorities and its IPs, mobilized communities and implemented 83 small and large scale projects in 2012. Annex 5 includes further details on the UNHCR's capacity and current implementation rates.

4.2. Effective Partnership

See Annex 8.

4.3 Management and Coordination Arrangements

The project will offer tailor made solutions to each location and case. A joint collaboration system (Project Advisory Board) will be established which will include the UN and other international agencies, local authorities, LSGA, Ombudsman's office, local NGOs and other representatives of the people. The committee will study the issues, agree on the type and level of intervention, and oversee the delivery of service through the feedback/conflict resolution mechanisms. UNHCR jointly with LSGA and other members of the oversight body will have the leading role, bring issues to the attention, call for meetings and organizes required activities in the field in close consultation with the local authorities.

The whole project will be implemented and managed by UNHCR Sub-Office Osh under the overall supervision of the UNHCR representation in Bishkek. The project contains provisions for an International Project Consultant, who will be support UNHCR program and protection staff during the establishment of the collaboration and coordination mechanisms and the implementation of the project. He/she will work closely with LSGs, oversight bodies and NGOs, as well as with other agencies. The international consultant will also coach a national project manager who will continue the management work to the end of the year.

Two local NGOs will be selected following UNHCR's IP selection procedures and in close consultation with government partners. They will be responsible for providing legal assistance and community mobilization, under the direct guidance of UNHCR protection officer and its protection team which consists at the time of three national staff. Three national UNVs will supplement UNHCR staff and assist especially in monitoring. UNHCR and NGO staff will be responsible for follow-up of cases, monitoring, coaching and advocacy.

UNHCR together with the NGO staff, concerned local authorities and community representatives will mobilize communities and local authorities for open dialogues and other activities as required.

UNHCR programme team will support the implementation of the project and undertakes all relevant project monitoring. This will include the implementation of at least 20 peacebuilding initiatives. Implementation of different medium to large scale projects in the past three years by UNHCR in the conflict affected areas built strong and trustful relationship with the local authorities (provincial, district administration, law enforcement bodies, Ayl Okmotu and community leaders) in all location where UNHCR is currently operating. Therefore, the existing relationship will be strengthened significantly which will facilitate the project's implementation and coordination in the field.

Issues requiring coordination with other agencies will be dealt with individually by the project consultant and by the protection officer through the Protection Sector Working Group meetings. Through these meetings, UNHCR and its partners will share experiences and information on selected areas of intervention. Topics will include thematic discussions on the project's progress and upcoming issues. Agencies will agree in complementing each other's activities in the field and their advocacy for follow up by the UNCT at the country level. They will draw lessons learned and provide feedback to the UNCT's recommendations. Furthermore, the agencies will clarify their priorities; non UN agencies will also share information and coordinate their activities. Thus, protection sector working group will serve as a strong feedback mechanism for the project since it represents all agencies that are currently operating in the south. Members of the protection sector working group shall have more open discussions, sharing information on main findings and challenges not only on the issues in the south but also on advocacy efforts at the national level. The meetings of the protection sector are to be held on monthly and quarterly basis, depending on the projects needs and the overall situation in the region.
