Over the past six months, the project has strengthened coordination with the Borno State Government and federal authorities to advance peacebuilding, reconciliation, and reintegration efforts.

At the state and local levels, in collaboration with the Ministries of Women Affairs and Social Development (MWASD), Local Government and Emirate Affairs (MLGEA), and Information and Internal Security (MOIIS), the project facilitated monthly youth-led dialogue sessions in Bama, Maiduguri Metropolitan Council, and Jere LGAs. These sessions engaged 450 participants, 180 women, 225 men, 30 religious leaders, and 15 children formerly associated with armed groups to promote inclusive dialogue and community action for peace.

The MOIIS also conducted a mobile van awareness campaign on reconciliation and peacebuilding across Bama, Banki, Gwoza, MMC, and Jere, reaching 2,306 participants (908 boys, 613 girls, 476 women, and 309 men) to strengthen community readiness for reintegration. Meanwhile, the MWASD led focus group discussions with 350 participants (150 women, 150 girls, and 50 men) on gender-based violence (GBV), emphasizing community-led actions to reduce early marriage and female genital mutilation.

At the state and federal levels, the project supported the development of the Borno Model Legal Framework, a key policy instrument for standardizing screening of individuals exiting armed groups. Multi-stakeholder consultations held in August and September 2025 brought together ministries, UN agencies, civil society, and traditional leaders to review and align the framework with human rights principles and the national DDRR framework.

Through sustained engagement and advocacy, the Ministry of Justice committed to finalizing the framework within two months. These efforts have strengthened government–partner coordination, enhanced institutional capacity, and advanced a rights-based foundation for reintegration and community resilience in Borno State

The project has achieved significant progress across its components, with staff recruitment completed and baseline studies conducted to establish data on community perceptions, socio-economic conditions, and service delivery gaps. These findings now guide planning, implementation, and performance monitoring. Formal agreements were signed with implementing partners, who have been onboarded on the project's objectives, safeguarding, and accountability frameworks. They are now delivering interventions at state and community levels, including stakeholder consultations, capacity-building, livelihood and entrepreneurship training, income-generation projects, and community sensitization to reduce stigma against former non-state armed group members and children affected by conflict. These activities advance reconciliation, reintegration, and child protection goals, including case management and support for unaccompanied and separated minors. Engagement of independent consultants continues based on identified priorities.

Following the receipt of second tranche in August 2025, new preparatory activities began for implementation through March 2026. These include a legal study on the use of screening information, research on biometric and sensitive data, and workshops supporting victims of terrorism through the application of global model legal provisions. Stakeholder consultations, expert identification, and coordination with national counterparts are ongoing to ensure legal compliance and national ownership. Preparations are also underway for engagements on victim support, including international expert meetings and training workshops. The Human Rights Due Diligence (HRDD) monitoring is ongoing while the progress on the Borno Model screening is awaiting approval of the legal framework, which is expected by November 2025. Consortium partners continue advocacy and refinement of the screening procedures now in final development stages.

Project progress summary

Please limit your response to 6000 characters

Between January and November 2025, the project recorded major progress in strengthening governance, institutional systems, and community structures that support sustainable peace, reconciliation, and reintegration in Borno State. The period marked a shift from preparatory groundwork to tangible, system-wide changes that improved transparency, accountability, and local ownership of peacebuilding efforts.

The project advanced key policy instruments critical to transitional justice and reintegration. A draft legal screening framework under the Borno Model anchored in confidentiality, non-discrimination, and due process was developed to guide fair, transparent decisions on individuals exiting armed groups. Once ratified, it will form the foundation for rights-based, state-led reintegration processes and strengthen public trust.

The Human Rights Due Diligence (HRDD) process was also strengthened, with an updated matrix and monitoring framework improving risk management, accountability, and alignment with international human rights standards. In addition, work began on a research study examining the ethical use of biometric and sensitive data during screening and reintegration to ensure compliance with legal and human rights safeguards, reinforcing national ownership and responsible data governance.

Service delivery in Borno State became more coordinated, professional, and inclusive. Through targeted capacity-building, 532 frontline personnel social workers, caseworkers, community facilitators, data officers, and mediators were trained across Bama, Jere, and MMC. This represents a major expansion from 273 trained in the first half of the year.

Training focused on psychosocial support, case management, transitional justice, data management, and localized referral systems. Post-training assessments showed a 42% improvement in coordination between state and community structures and a 35% increase in practitioners' ability to apply gender- and conflict-sensitive approaches. These improvements enhanced institutional linkages, reduced service duplication, and strengthened reintegration pathways for survivors, returnees, and vulnerable households.

In partnership with the Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development, the project strengthened child protection systems across Bama, Jere, and MMC.

2,106 children affected by grave violations received identification, documentation, and Explosive Ordnance Risk Education.

413 children formerly associated with armed groups accessed case management, MHPSS, and referrals at the Bulunkutu and Bama centers.

138 unaccompanied and separated children were placed in foster care, and 90 were reunified with families across four states.

Nearly 2,000 adolescents and school children were sensitized on safeguarding and SEA prevention.

These interventions enhanced community-based reintegration, family-based care, and psychosocial recovery.

A total of 765 community members, including religious, traditional, youth leaders and 15 children formerly associated with armed groups, were mobilized as peace ambassadors. Youth-led dialogues conducted between August and November strengthened acceptance of returnees, improved community cohesion, and enhanced the role of community reintegration committees—particularly in Bama as credible structures for mediation and local dispute resolution.

Livelihood support to 600 women, including ex-associates and vulnerable groups, led to significant economic gains. Follow-up data from 185 beneficiaries showed:

79% now have sustainable income sources (above the 65% target).

90% report increased savings.

98% have improved food security, compared with 56% at baseline.

98% have improved food security, compared with 56% at baseline.

These results demonstrate the effectiveness of combining skills training, financial inclusion, and psychosocial preparedness. However, youth reintegration requires deeper investment, with only 35% of ex-associates aged 15–35 reporting readiness for full societal reintegration.

Indicate any additional analysis on how Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment and/or Youth Inclusion and Responsiveness has been ensured by the project to date *

Please limit your response to 3000 characters

Gender equality and youth inclusion were fully integrated across all components of the programme, ensuring that women and young people served not only as beneficiaries but as active peacebuilders and decision-makers. Women now represent nearly half of all trained personnel and community actors, contributing significantly to improved access to gender-responsive services, community mediation, and social cohesion. Youth-led peace dialogues and economic cooperatives have further transformed community perceptions and strengthened intergenerational trust.

The programme also advanced gender inclusivity by engaging vulnerable men as part of a holistic approach to peacebuilding. Through targeted outreach and training, 100 men were empowered as male champions restoring their agency, promoting shared responsibility, and fostering broader community acceptance of reintegration efforts under the Borno Model. This shift addressed gaps identified in earlier gender assessments, which had highlighted the limited inclusion of men despite their increasing vulnerability in conflict-affected settings. By adopting a balanced and inclusive strategy, the programme strengthened community recovery, reinforced gender equity, and deepened social cohesion across participating communities.

Empowering communities, children, and caregivers:

Human rights, protection awareness, and community responsibility expanded across conflict-affected areas. Through community-led outreach, 315 stakeholders (including 82 women) facilitated sensitization campaigns in Bama and neighboring LGAs, improving acceptance of individuals formerly associated with armed groups and reducing stigma.

The Ministry of Information and Internal Security (MOIIS) conducted mobile van campaigns across Bama, Banki, Gwoza, MMC, and Jere, reaching 2,306 children and caregivers with messages on reconciliation, child protection, and peacebuilding.

In parallel, BSMWASD reached 2,106 children with Explosive Ordnance Risk Education (EORE), enabling safer behaviour among in-school and out-of-school children.

2. Strengthening reintegration and child protection systems:

Reintegration and child protection services became more coordinated and locally driven. A total of 248 frontline personnel—child protection workers, government staff, and members of the Reintegration Technical Working Group —were trained in gender-sensitive and trauma-informed approaches aligned with the Borno Model.

BSMWASD trained 15 auxiliary social workers and 2 data officers on socio-economic profiling and data management for children formerly associated with armed groups in Bulumkutu and Hajj camps. An additional 22 auxiliary social workers in Bama enhanced case management for newly arrived and vulnerable children.

The Interim Care Centre (ICC) in Bulumkutu continued to provide MHPSS, case management, and family tracing. From June to September, 127 children were released from administrative custody, and 68 were reunified with families in Borno and neighbouring states.

Together with civil society partners, 138 unaccompanied and separated children (UASC) were placed with trained foster families. 286 children formerly associated with armed groups received case management, psychosocial support, and referrals. 59 GBV survivors (34 girls, 25 women) also received counselling and referral services.

3. Promoting gender equality, GBV prevention, and PSEA:

Interventions in Bama, MMC, Jere, and Banki strengthened prevention and response systems for GBV and sexual exploitation and abuse.

• 350 community members participated in discussions on early marriage, FGM, and GBV awareness.

• 782 women and girls benefitted from GBV prevention and risk-mitigation activities.

• 1,987 children and adolescents learned safe reporting pathways for SEA.

• 62 women and girls received dignity kits, while 578 women and children accessed GBV response services.

These actions improved community safety, strengthened referrals, and enhanced survivor-centered assistance.

4. Advancing legal accountability and protection mechanisms:

Work advanced on legal and research initiatives supporting the Borno Model. A legal study on the use of biometric and sensitive data gathered during screening was initiated to align procedures with human rights and legal safeguards.

In parallel, preparations began to strengthen victim-centered approaches under the global Model Legal Provisions (MLP). This included developing training materials, expert consultations, and planning workshops in Vienna, Abuja, and Maiduguri to build national capacity to support victims of terrorism.

5. Strengthening Human Rights Due Diligence (HRDD):

The HRDD framework was actively implemented to ensure reintegration efforts remained consistent with human rights standards. Activities included updating the HRDD risk matrix, refining mitigation actions, and conducting regular consultations with partners. Technical support helped clarify institutional roles, enhance coordination, and reinforce government ownership, strengthening compliance and accountability across the programme.

6. Strengthening community leadership and transitional justice structures:

Community-led reconciliation continued to grow. Traditional and religious leaders played a stronger role in mediating disputes and guiding peace efforts across multiple LGAs. In February 2025, 65 participants from traditional institutions, CSOs, and government ministries were trained on conflict analysis, participatory development, and the Community-Based Reconciliation and Reintegration (CBRR) framework.

In Bama, a 33-member Operationalization of Reintegration Committee (ORC) was established, with the inclusion of women and persons with disabilities. Youth-led dialogues organized by the Ministry of Local Government and Emirate Affairs engaged 450 community members, including religious leaders and former child combatants, strengthening collective action for peace and social cohesion.

7. Consolidating state-led coordination and peacebuilding:
By November 2025, coordination among ministries, traditional institutions, and communities significantly improved. Borno strengthened its standing as a national model for community-centred peacebuilding, with evidence of higher trust, stronger early-warning capacity, and improved understanding of reintegration mechanisms among frontline actors, justice institutions, and traditional leaders.

If yes, please provide sources or references (including links) as evidence of peacebuilding results, or submit them as additional attachments.

Evidence may be quantitative or qualitative but needs to demonstrate progress against outcome indicators in the project results framework. Sources may include project surveys (such as perception surveys), monitoring reports, government documents, or other knowledge products that have been developed by the project.

Human Impact

This section is about the human impact of the project. Please state key stakeholders (including but not limited to: Civil Society Organziations, Beneficiaries, etc.) of the project, and for each, please briefly describe:

i. The challenges/problem they faced prior to the project implemantation
ii. The impact of the project in their lives
iii. Provide, where possible, a quote or testimonial from a representative of each stakeholder group
This is an optional question. You may leave it unanswered if not relevant

1	Female returnee, survivor of abduction and early marriage under Boko Haram, currently residing at GSSS IDP Camp, Bama, Borno State	Following her identification and referral by camp authorities, the Consortium and the Borno State Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development (MWASD) enrolled Zara into psychosocial support and vocational training under the Zainab Gimba Second Chance for Women and Girls Skills and Entrepreneurship Centre in Bama. She received life skills coaching, counselling, peace mentoring, and training in cosmetology, alongside food, nutrition, and NFI support. Through six months of structured engagement, Zara regained confidence, developed coping mechanisms, and began small-scale petty trading and cap making using her transport allowance as seed capital. With improved income, she now provides for her children, interacts freely with community members, and mentors other women in business skills and resilience. Her transformation demonstrates the success of the reintegration model that combines psychosocial support, livelihood training, and community inclusion to restore dignity and hope to survivors of conflict-related gender-based violence. Zara is set to graduate in December 2025 with start-up kits to establish her own cosmetology business	"When I arrived at the camp, life was unbearable. I was caring for four children alone, rejected by my family, and people insulted me for my past. I almost gave up and thought of going back to the bush. But when i was supported with food, counselling, and skills training, everything changed. Now I feel confident and respected again. I have started petty trading and cap making, and I even teach other women how to start small businesses. For the first time, I believe my children and I have a future." Zara (not real name), beneficiary, Bama Community, August 2025

2	Rehabilitated former NSAG and Vulnerable community member in community of reintegration (Bama, Monguno, MMC, and Jere).	Before the intervention, 91% of respondents earned less than ₦10,000 monthly; now, 89% earn above that threshold, and 90% report increased savings. Food security also improved as 56% previously ate only one meal per day, now 98% eats two to three meals Mental health and psychosocial support (MHPSS) activities have also made a strong impact. All participants rated the services as effective or very effective, with 76% reporting increased confidence and self-esteem with positive changes in gender norms	"Before the support, I struggled to feed my children and felt isolated. Now, with better income and the psychosocial support we received, I feel more confident and hopeful. We eat well, save a little, and slowly rebuild our lives." A rehabilitated former associate from Bama community

3	Vulnerable community member, specifically displaced women and children	At 39, Jennifer Usman, a mother of four from Maiduguri, had grown tired of surviving on humanitarian aid. The conflict in northeast Nigeria had taken away her stability, and with her husband missing since their displacement, she struggled daily to feed her children. "I wanted to work, but I had nothing, no capital, no equipment, no skills," she said. Jennifer's turning point came when she was selected for the Women's Pilot Project funded by the Peacebuilding Fund (PBF), which supports vulnerable women with vocational skills, psychosocial assistance, and start-up kits for small businesses. She joined the baking and entrepreneurship training, learning bread and cake production, record-keeping, marketing, and business planning. "It was the first time anyone believed I could run a business," she said. "The training gave us skills and confidence." After completing the programme, she received a start-up baking kit and launched a small home bakery. Her buns, cakes, and cookies quickly became popular in her neighborhood and nearby shops. As demand grew, Jennifer brought in her younger sister, Grace an unemployed graduate and later another young woman, Janet. The three expanded production and began taking orders for birthdays and community events. Today, Jennifer runs a thriving business, employs two young women, saves from her profits, and mentors others who want to start small enterprises. "If I could rise from nothing, others can too," she says. The Women's Pilot Project has supported hundreds of women across Maiduguri and Jere with	I wanted to work, but I had nothing, no capital, no equipment, no skills that could earn money." "It was the first time anyone believed I could run a business," "The trainers taught us not just baking but confidence." "If I could rise from nothing, others can too," across Maiduguri and Jere with skills in baking, tailoring, soap-making, and other trades, helping families rebuild livelihoods and reduce dependence on aid. Every morning, the smell of freshly baked bread fills Jennifer's compound a reminder that with opportunity and support, women can transform not only their own lives but their communities as well.

In the reintegration community, the project continues to demonstrate how empowered beneficiaries can become agents of change. Balkis, one of the trained participants, now serves as a mentor and trainer to other vulnerable community members. Through hands-on, peer-to-peer learning, her apprentices are gaining practical livelihood skills that support their journey toward self-reliance and sustainable reintegration.

One of her apprentices shared that the PBF-supported initiative has enabled them to access training within the community, acquire marketable skills, and begin building pathways to income generation. This cascading impact reflects the project's objective: empowering individuals who then transfer knowledge, uplift others, and strengthen community resilience.

"Balkis's success is an inspiration. She is not just rebuilding her life; she is uplifting others and strengthening our community."

Her role as both a beneficiary and a trainer highlights how the project fosters skill multiplication, community ownership, and long-term reintegration outcomes.

Innovative Way of Working

The project introduced an innovative, community-driven approach where trained women like Balkis not only build their own livelihoods but also serve as peer trainers. This cascading model multiplies impact organically within reintegration communities. Instead of relying solely on formal training centers, beneficiaries transfer skills directly to others through apprenticeships, allowing knowledge to spread faster, reduce costs, and strengthen ownership at community level. This approach has improved sustainability, expanded reach, and demonstrated how empowered individuals can become drivers of reintegration.

Strengthened Capacity

Through PBF-supported vocational and psychosocial training, the project significantly strengthened the capacity of vulnerable women to achieve self-reliance. Participants gained practical skills in trades such as baking, tailoring, and small-scale entrepreneurship, while also developing confidence, financial literacy, and business planning abilities. The impact extends beyond the primary beneficiaries: several trained women now mentor others in their communities, further expanding skills and contributing to long-term reintegration and socioeconomic stability.

Partnership with Civil Society Organizations

The project worked closely with local civil society organizations to ensure inclusive implementation, community mobilization, and sustained follow-up for beneficiaries. CSOs helped identify vulnerable individuals, facilitated access to safe learning spaces, and provided ongoing monitoring and psychosocial support. Their involvement strengthened community trust and enhanced accountability. By leveraging CSO networks and knowledge of local dynamics, the project expanded its reach and improved the quality of reintegration support delivered to women across targeted communities

PART IV: Monitoring, Evaluation and Compliance

» Monitoring

Please list key monitoring activities undertaken in the reporting period *

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

During the reporting period, regular monitoring visits were conducted in Bama LGA to assess progress under the reintegration and social cohesion components of the project. The visits were jointly carried out by UNICEF field staff, State facilitators, and representatives from the Borno State Ministry of Information and Internal Security (MOIIS).

The monitoring team observed tangible progress in reintegration activities targeting children formerly associated with non-state armed groups (NSAGs) and other vulnerable children at risk. A total of 106 children (60 girls, 46 boys) successfully completed vocational and life skills training and were provided with livelihood start-up kits to support sustainable income generation and strengthen their resilience and reintegration within host communities. Beneficiaries demonstrated improved self-confidence and participation in community life, with many initiating small-scale income-generating activities.

In parallel, the MOIIS, with UNICEF's technical and financial support, implemented an extensive information and advocacy campaign across four communities Kirkasama, Tashan-Bultuwa, Shuari, and Mamzarma within Bama town. The initiative engaged 315 participants, including 53 religious leaders (all men), 103 community leaders, 82 women, and 77 youth group leaders. These engagements promoted reconciliation, social cohesion, and the reintegration of low-risk former associates by addressing fear, stigma, and mistrust among affected populations, including IDPs and residents of formerly NSAG-controlled areas.

Monthly field monitoring continued throughout the reporting period, led by UNICEF-assigned State facilitators, who provided continuous technical support, data collection, and reporting to ensure accountability and adaptive management. The field observations confirm that project interventions are contributing to enhanced community acceptance, increased livelihood opportunities for youth and children, and improved coordination between local authorities, religious leaders, and social service actors

Yes, the project has a well-defined exit strategy that focuses on strengthening local capacity, institutional ownership, and policy integration to ensure the sustainability of peacebuilding and reintegration gains beyond its lifespan.

To achieve this, the project prioritized capacity building for beneficiaries, community leaders, and government counterparts to enable them to independently manage reintegration and reconciliation initiatives. Community structures, including the Operational Reintegration Committees (ORCs), were established and trained to monitor ongoing activities and provide technical oversight after project closure.

Sustainability is further reinforced through strong government ownership. Key ministries have been actively involved in planning and coordination, ensuring that reintegration processes are institutionalized within state systems. The Borno State Government's adoption of the Community-Based Reconciliation and Reintegration (CBRR) Policy and endorsement of the Lake Chad Transitional Justice Framework provide long-term policy anchors for continuity. These frameworks establish clear coordination mechanisms and define roles for sustained implementation.

Additionally, the collaborative ongoing development of Borno Model screening procedures, led jointly with the Office of the Deputy Governor and the Ministry of Justice, ensures legal and procedural integration of reintegration processes into state structures. This institutionalization is a critical step toward long-term sustainability.

Finally, the project's community-driven approach including local committee engagement and continuous awareness efforts has fostered strong ownership at the grassroots level. Even as Bama LGA continues to receive new arrivals from hard-to-reach areas, the presence of trained local actors, government commitment, and established coordination mechanisms collectively guarantee that peacebuilding outcomes will be maintained and scaled beyond the project's duration.

Are there any other issues concerning project implementation that you want to share, including any capacity needs of the recipient organizations?

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

While considerable progress has been made, the receipt of the second tranche was delayed, which impacted the pace of implementation. The security situation in Northeast Nigeria also posed operational disruptions during the period. Renewed attacks by Boko Haram and ISWAP across the BAY States, including the seizure of Kirawa on October 3, 2025, and multiple ambushes between September and October, led to temporary suspension of field missions. Notably, two DDRR field team members were evacuated from Banki on September 19 following an ISWAP attack and safely returned after conditions stabilized on September 23. These incidents underscore the need for enhanced security coordination and contingency planning, including staff safety training, psychosocial support, and flexible implementation modalities to adapt to volatile contexts.

Despite these challenges, strong collaboration between UN agencies, government ministries, and community structures has ensured continuity of services. Strengthening institutional capacity, expanding funding partnerships, and improving security risk management remain essential to sustaining and scaling the project's peacebuilding achievements across Borno State.
