The Project Technical Committee (PTC) has convened twice in the past six months, specifically in May and September of this year, marking significant milestones in our collaborative efforts. Initially, it was planned to establish both a Technical Committee and a Steering Committee, each with individual roles and responsibilities. However, after series of consultations with stakeholders and partners, a consensus was reached to streamline this decision. This led to the decision to form a singular PTC that encompasses key partners originally designated for the Steering Committee.

This is a strategy which represents a consolidated approach to the project overview, which was the reason to combine the expertise and perspectives of various stakeholders into one cohesive body. The Project Technical Committee is empowered with a clear mandate to oversee the project's affairs comprehensively which includes providing guidance, strategic direction, and expert advice as needed throughout the project lifecycle.

The composition of the committee is diverse and includes members from the UNPBF Secretariat, which brings a wealth of best practices and frameworks to the table. Additionally, representatives from the Gambian government partners contribute invaluable insights into local governance, regulatory frameworks, and socio-economic contexts. ActionAid, known for its commitment to social justice and community empowerment, adds a critical lens on grassroots engagement and advocacy. Furthermore, the implementing partners, who are directly involved in executing project activities, ensure that the committee remains grounded in practical realities and operational challenges.

This collaborative structure is designed to foster open communication and facilitate a shared understanding of project goals among all members. Quarterly meetings and discussions allow for the exchange of ideas, identification of potential challenges, and the development of innovative solutions. The committee's collective expertise ensures that we remain committed and responsive to the dynamic environment in which we operate.

Moreover, the Project Technical Committee plays a crucial role in monitoring and evaluating project progress and can assess the effectiveness of various interventions and make informed decisions about necessary adjustments. This approach enhances accountability and ensures the project aligns with its overarching objectives of fostering sustainable development and empowering communities.

In conclusion, the Project Technical Committee represents a significant step forward in our commitment to effective project governance. By bringing together the strengths of diverse partners and fostering a collaborative spirit, which will navigate the challenges ahead and achieve meaningful outcomes. The committee's ongoing work will be instrumental in steering the project towards success, ensuring that we meet our goals and make a lasting impact in the communities we serve.

Please provide a brief description of any engagement that the project has had with the government over the last 6 months. Please indicate what level of government the project has been engaging with.

We have been actively collaborating with various departments of the Gambian government, over the past six months, following the signing of contract with the National Youth Council (NYC). This partnership strengthens the collaboration with government and assigned NYC to take the lead on the Youth Bill, Youth Policy Implementation Framework, and Standard Operating Procedures for Youth Organizations on behalf of the Ministry of Youth and Sports. By granting the NYC this leadership role, we are ensuring that they can effectively coordinate all meetings among stakeholders including government entities, the National Assembly, AAITG and other Civil Society Organizations.

Following the signing of the contract, funds were disbursed to NYC for the development of the Standard Operating Procedures (SOP). Recognizing the importance of an inclusive process, the NYC has engaged a consultant tasked with facilitating discussions with youth across both the Greater Banjul Area and rural regions. This initiative is crucial to ensure that the voices of all young people are heard and that no one is left behind in the development of this important document.

Since the inception of this project, AAITG have also engaged with the Ministry of Youth and Sports (MoYS) and the Department of Youth and Sports (DoYS). Our efforts have included training staff from these institutions, specifically the Regional Youth Coordinators and Committees as well as the District Youth Committees (DYC), in various spheres of development (HRBA, Leadership, Mediation, Conflict Resolution, and Reflect Action Circles trainings). These capacity-building initiatives have resulted to increased knowledge and skills leading to gradual attitudinal changes, thus promoting active youth engagement and inclusion in peace building initiative.

As a result of the project engagement with the Ministry of Communications and Digital Economy (MoCDE), a comprehensive database has been developed for the DoYS under MoYS. This database serves as a vital resource for tracking youth empowerment initiatives and outcomes. To enhance the database's effectiveness, MoCDE has reached out to various satellite institutions working on youth empowerment, encouraging them to contribute relevant data and insights. This collaborative approach not only enriches the database but also fosters a sense of shared responsibility among stakeholders in the youth empowerment ecosystem.

Through these multifaceted collaborations, the project is laying a solid foundation for the successful enactment of the Youth Bill and the overall enhancement of youth empowerment initiatives in The Gambia. Our commitment to inclusion, capacity building, and inter-agency cooperation is pivotal in addressing the challenges faced by young people and ensuring their active participation in the development of policies that affect their lives.

Disbursements of funds were made to Activista and the Apexes and Eco-zones while the Department, SaHMA and Global Platform do not directly receive funds to implement activities but actively participate in all activity implementation. Office equipment including laptops, routers and printers were procured and distributed to most of the partners to facilitate their work in the project implementation process. The project was designed to be coordinated by the existing staff of ActionAid, however, as part of strategies to improve the pace of the implementation process, Senior Management decided to recruit a full time Project Manager to lead the entire coordination of the project supported by the existing staff to enable the completion of project activities before project closure. The staff is in place and currently working with the team. During the national engagement with the Ministry of Youth and Sports on the best modality to implement the review and enactment of the Youth Bill and development of Implementation Framework for the Youth Policy, we were informed that the Youth Bill is advanced and currently at the level of cabinet for submission to the National Assembly in the third quarter of 2025 and cannot be resubmitted for public consultation. Instead, the ministry suggested that the project can support the development of the Regulatory Guideline for the Act and this could be more detail to be more responsive to all the needs of the youth. The meeting at NYC indicated that the Youth Policy is already over 5years and is planned to be updated as the Terms of Reference is already developed in preparation for the recruitment of a consultant with the support of a UN agency. Therefore, the project was requested to support the consultation at District level and the development of implementation framework for the revised policy. The National Youth Council (NYC) is the technical unit assigned by the ministry to lead these strategic processes and it has become evident that working closely with the council will enhance its quick and successful implementation by the government to ensure ownership and sustainability. For this reason, ActionAid has signed an MoU with the National Youth Council and has disbursed funds for implementation of activities.  *

Project progress summary

The project continues to make steady progress toward achieving its goal of promoting youth inclusion in civic spaces and strengthening local infrastructures for peace. Considerable strides have been made in ensuring that young people are meaningfully represented in decision-making structures at community, district, and regional levels. This reporting period has witnessed expanded outreach, transformative community engagement, capacity building, and strengthened institutional collaboration that are fostering an enabling environment for youth participation in governance and peace building processes.

A total of 150 communities across four regions benefited from comprehensive Door-to-Door Campaigns, which reached 3,974 participants from 662 households. These campaigns were instrumental in sensitizing communities on youth inclusion, peaceful coexistence, and civic engagement. Through interpersonal interactions, community members reflected on local governance challenges and the role of youth in peace building. This approach also enhanced trust between young people and traditional authorities, laying a foundation for sustained collaboration. Inter-generational dialogues and advocacy caravans conducted in diverse localities yielded visible behavioural change. Many communities embraced youth participation, resulting in tangible outcomes such as the inclusion of youth representatives in Village Development Committees (VDCs). Follow-up assessments and training of 32 VDCs led to the restructuring of several committees—some dissolved and reconstituted their leadership entirely, while others elected young people into executive positions, including Chairperson, Treasurer, and Secretary. A total of 530 VDC members were trained, of whom 150 were youth (80 males and 70 females). Monitoring visits confirmed these positive changes, including the election of a female youth as VDC Chairperson.

During the caravan campaign, District Chiefs publicly committed to including youth in District Tribunals. The Ministry of Lands, Regional Government, and Religious Affairs, in collaboration with the Judiciary, has begun reviewing the District Tribunal Act of 1933 to promote inclusivity. Meanwhile, the National Action Plan for Youth, Peace, and Security (NAP-YPS) 2025–2030 was launched and rolled out across all eight administrative areas of the country in collaboration with UN Agencies (UNDP and UNFPA) and other partners. The framework guides coordination of youth, peace, and security interventions. The rollout, engaging the UNPBF Secretariat, ActionAid Gambia, the National Youth Council, and the Technical Working Group on Youth, Peace and Security, emphasized community ownership. Consultations across Upper River Region (Basse), North Bank Region (Kerewan), and Central River Region North and South (Janjanbureh and Kaur) reflected strong commitment to transparency, inclusivity, and grassroots participation.

Five Area Councils benefited from training on the Human Rights-Based Approach (HRBA) to development and Feminist Leadership to improve youth-responsive service delivery. A total of 122 staff and councillors (97 males, 25 females) were trained, enhancing their ability to apply human rights principles in governance. Additionally, 133 personnel (56 males, 77 females) from the Department of Youth and Sports (DoYS) and volunteers across all regions received HRBA and feminist leadership training. Four civil society partners—Jimbana, Kerr Chernoo Ecozones, Global Platform, and SaHMA through Activista—conducted step-down sessions reaching 310 participants (153 males, 157 females). These efforts deepened understanding of equality, inclusion, and accountability.

To address operational and reporting challenges, DoYS regional offices received seven laptops, seven routers, and seven printers. This support improved communication and report submission timelines. Monitoring feedback confirms enhanced efficiency and reliable internet access. The recently launched data based is expected to further strengthen evidenced-based decision making.

Project partners and District and Regional Youth Committees held advocacy meetings with five Area Councils to lobby for the allocation of at least five percent of community development revenue to youth programs. Five meetings were conducted with 296 youth participants. following these advocacy meetings, the Janjanbureh, Kuntaur and MansaKonko Area Councils funded the Regional Youth Convergence in their respective Local Government Areas.

Five Civic Education Camps were conducted in all regions of the project, attended by 209 youth (81 females, 128 males). A peace and sports youth camp was organized in the Central River Region, where 24 football teams participated. Before the tournament, team officials received training on peacebuilding and conflict resolution, resulting in a violence-free event for the first time in the region's history. Between July 18th and September 25th, 2025, over 200 youths gathered daily, fostering friendship and peaceful interaction. Local authorities praised the project and ActionAid for supporting this initiative, which strengthened conflict management capacities.

Regional and District Youth Committees were also supported to conduct Reflect Action Circles and implement action plans. A Training of Trainers (ToT) built their capacity to cascade training to village-level committees. A total of 109 participants (71 males, 38 females) were reached.

Overall, the period demonstrates steady progress in youth empowerment, civic engagement, and peace infrastructure. The combination of advocacy, capacity building, institutional reforms, and grassroots mobilization has contributed to building resilient communities where young people are recognized as key actors in governance and peacebuilding.

Indicate any additional analysis on how Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment and/or Youth Inclusion and Responsiveness has been ensured by the project to date

Please limit your response to 3000 characters

In our quest for inclusive society, promotion of women and other marginalized young people are not left out. To ensure this, efforts were made during the planning process to have both genders represented and effectively participated during activities implementation. For instance, during the door-to-door campaign, of the 3,974 people reached, 2148 were women representing 54%. in addition, the members of the Rural Women Assembly were deliberately targeted to lead the campaign caravan for the inclusion of youths in the Local structures as an affirmative action on gender equality and empowerment. In total, 530 (288 males, 242 females) VDC members were reach, out of which, 45.66% are females. Out of the 530 VDC members, 150 are youth and 46.6 % are females. At least a third of the participants of journalists and bloggers trained in youth participation and civic space were females. Females formed 53% of the participants in the HRBA and Feminist leadership trainings and 39% of the civic education camps.

Similarly, there were 87 females (29%) out 296 participants in the advocacy meetings with the Area Councils. Although football is male dominated sports in The Gambia, 3 out of the 40 officials trained are females.

The project has made strides in achieving its targets for youth inclusion in civic space and local peacebuilding efforts. This initiative has shifted community attitude, leading to the restructuring of various Village Development Committees (VDCs), with some committees dissolving entirely and others incorporating youth into key leadership roles such as Chairperson, Treasurer, and Secretary. The monitoring feedback highlighted that of the 10 VDCs visited all have restructured and included young and marginalized people such as persons with disabilities in their VDCs. For example, Jamara Sara in Central River Region selected a female youth as chairperson of the VDC and a PWD as secretary. Similarly, Njie Kunda in the North Bank Region revitalized their VDC, which is now functional and inclusive of youth. This VDC embarked on a fundraising initiative such as a cultivation of a millet village farm and engaged in paid labour. The established of the new VDC. This enabled the village youth acquire resources and funded their participation in the District Football tournament for the first time. These are signs of structural changes happening in communities through the activities of VDCs. Moreover, it is important to note that our training and interactions have led to the inclusion of youth in the VDCs, with the area council also recognizing the value of their participation. This collaborative approach not only strengthens local governance but also fosters a sense of ownership among young people in their communities.

Through these initiatives, we are laying the groundwork for a more inclusive society where women, youth, and marginalized groups can thrive and contribute meaningfully to their communities. This involves shifts in how individuals and groups perceive conflict issues now. The youth that were trained in conflict and mediation are transferring the knowledge gained among their peers as they feel very empowered not to be used by politicians especially to achieve their cause. Peace-building training has started changing their perception about how people interact, reducing violence and promoting cooperation.

Furthermore, another example of positive attitude noted during the reporting period under the project was a training of the officials of the competing teams, coaches and captains were trained on peace and conflict resolution and the best practices of football which resulted to a violent free tournament for the first in the history of Central River Region sports. This has been an opportunity to talk to young people, women and persons with disability about peace for social cohesion.

The equipment and trainings given to staff of the department of youth and sports in both headquarters and regional offices has started improving the services delivered to young people. This is a demonstration of the institutional changes noted which contribute greatly to young people participation in civic space and local infrastructure for peace. The coordinator expressed heartfelt appreciation, emphasizing that this support has not only improved service delivery but also restored confidence in their ability to fulfil their mandate to the young people of the region. "This support has transformed the way we work. Before, we struggled to even send emails or print documents. Now, we're mobile and able to work both online and offline bringing services closer to the youth," Musa Jarra-Regional Youth Coordinator, Upper River Region.

On the side of the Civil Society Organizations/Community Based Organizations, there are institutional changes noted, for example ACTIVISTA (youth-led organization) was supported to conduct a congress which brought together their old and new members to reflect, inspire and strategize their programme implementation for better advocacy for young people. Additionally, Safe Home for Migrants Association (SAHMA) a women led organisation, was able to strengthen their internal systems and coordination which helped them to improve on their reporting, planning, and documentation processes, which has made their work more transparent and professional.

Human Impact	Type of stakeholder	What has been the impact of the project on their lives?	Provide, where possible, a quote or testimonial from the stakeholder

1	Department of Youth and Sports	Before the advent of this project, staff of the Department of Youth and Sports struggled with inadequate availability of working tools for their head quarter staff and regional Youth Coordinators. Through this project, the staff were supported with IT equipment-including a laptop, Wifi Router and colour printer and capacity building trainings on HRBA, leadership, mediation, and conflict	“Thanks to the provision of vital IT equipment—including a laptop, Wi-Fi router, and colour printer. The office is now better equipped to serve the region’s youth. Previously, old laptops and the absence of a functioning printer had severely hampered productivity-Jim Lowe-Regional Youth Coordinator, Central River Region The coordinator expressed heartfelt appreciation, emphasizing that this support has not only improved service delivery but also restored confidence in their ability to fulfil their mandate to the young people of the region. “This support has transformed the way we work. Before, we struggled to even send emails or print documents. Now, we’re mobile and able to work both online and offline bringing services closer to the youth,” Musa Jarra-Regional Youth Coordinator, Upper River Region “The project has eased the communication among the staff of the Department of Youth and Sports under the Ministry of Youth and Sports at the head and Regional offices, the Regional Youth and Sports committees as well as the district youth and Sports Committees which is improving report writing and timely submission and dissemination of reports”-Deputy Director, DoYS

2	National Youth Council and Regional Youth Committees and Youth led CSOs	The Project has strengthened the capacities of the Youth Representative to coordinate better at regional and district levels which was lacking. Before the project interventions, local councils were not allocating many funds for youth development. As a result of the capacity buildings training for the councils coupled with the advocacy on increase investment for youth development, the councils started giving more support to the young people.	“Before the training, I didn’t know how to manage conflict, but now I can settle any conflict”, The Secretary - District Youth Committee - Lower Badibu “Promoted peace and security roles of young people in schools as result of sensitization on the National Action Plan for Youth Peace and Security” — Ebrima Jarra, Vice President, Global Platform Lower River Region “After the sensitization on the National Action Plan for youth peace and security and the civic education camp, I supported returnees’ integration through mentorship and guidance” — Lamin EN Sanyang, Civic Teacher “I rate youth involvement and participation in civic spaces in Central River Region at 90%, because even when they are not invited, they find ways to be involved.” — Regional Sports Coordinator, Central River Region “Following the 5% advocacy, Janjangbureh Area Council supported young people with food items and cash for the Central River Region Youth Convergence.” — Regional Youth Coordinator, Central River Region “We have advocated for 5% of the council fund for youth development, resulting to food and cash support from the council for Youth Convergence”— Lower River Region Regional Youth Committee Chairman “The Reflection Action Circles training empowered the youth of Lower River Region to develop a comprehensive regional plan for youth engagement and development, which is now being implemented”— Regional Youth Coordinator, Lower River Region

3	Local Governance Structures	Before this project intervention, many of the VDC structure were non-functional and dominated by adult males above the youth category. The various project interventions, the capacity (knowledge and skills) of the VDCs has been strengthened. The monitoring feedback has shown many community development initiatives for example a community developed by-laws to manage the use of their local resources for the development of their village. Another example from the VDC assessment and training was the village of Njie Kunda in Lower Badibu District, where community inspiration and engagement led to the revitalization of their VDC by including youth, women and PWD, a vital step toward inclusion and sustainable local development. Jamara Sarra has a VDC but not inclusive. Following the VDC assessment and training, the village restructured their VDC and made it inclusive by having a woman as a chairperson and a PWD as the secretary.	“The capacity building of VDCs minimized conflict between elderly and the youth” District Youth Chairperson – Lower Badibu “This project gave us the language and tools to demand inclusion,” shared by Batch Njie, Secretary to the VDC in Jamara Sarr Kunda. “We now understand that development starts with our own involvement and youth must be part of that journey.” “My disability will never define my limits, only my determination will. Before this training, we knew very little about the role of VDCs. Youth were mostly sidelined. But today, I stand more informed, more confident, and more determined to shape the future of my community,” Batch Njie, 19 years, Secretary of the VDC, Jamara Sarr Kunda.

4	Project Partners	Before this project intervention, capacities of the project partners were weak. The project supported them in strengthening their institutional capacity through Human Right Based Approach and Feminist Leadership training which resulted to the restructuring of their governance system.	"Continuous engagement with duty bearers during implementation strengthened our networks and institutional relationships."-National Coordinator Activista Gambia "The institutional support funds are key in the revitalization processes of Activista. In addition to the stakeholder specific impact described above, please use this space to describe any additional human impact that the project has had.

Please limit your response to 4000 characters.

Beyond institutional and stakeholder-level outcomes, the project has produced profound human impacts at the individual, household, and community levels. By expanding civic space, promoting inter-generational dialogue, and empowering young people—especially young women—to become active agents of change, the initiative has transformed attitudes, relationships, and behaviors across multiple layers of society.

1. Empowered Youth as Agents of Peace and Governance

The project has given young people a voice and sense of belonging within their communities. Many youths who previously felt excluded from local decision-making now actively participate in Village and Ward Development Committees, with several holding leadership positions such as Chairperson, Secretary, or Treasurer. This visible shift in leadership dynamics has not only boosted youth confidence but has also reshaped how communities perceive the role of young people—as partners in governance rather than passive observers.

Young participants reported increased self-esteem, negotiation skills, and civic awareness, enabling them to engage local leaders constructively and resolve conflicts through dialogue rather than confrontation. For many, this was their first opportunity to experience leadership, public speaking, and policy engagement—skills that will continue to serve them and their communities long after the project's completion.

2. Transformation of Gender Norms and Youth Leadership

The inclusion of a Human Rights-Based Approach (HRBA) and feminist leadership training has made remarkable impacts on youth especially women and marginalized. Many young women who previously lacked confidence to participate in civic space now hold visible positions in local committees and advocacy networks. Their participation has inspired other women and girls to challenge restrictive social norms and aspire to leadership roles.

Through community dialogues, male leaders and elders have become advocates for youth inclusion, acknowledging their contributions to peace-building and local development. This cultural shift is one of the most significant human impacts of the project, laying the foundation for more equitable participation of youth in civic space from community to national levels.

3. Strengthened Social Cohesion and Community Trust

Inter-generational dialogues and peace camps has started bridging the gaps between youth and elders, fostering mutual understanding and respect. In many communities visited, tensions that once arose from generational or gender differences have diminished. They shared activities such as youth peace marathons, community sports, and civic education camps have built unity and collective purpose, replacing suspicion with collaboration.

Communities now report greater openness in discussing civic issues, with traditional leaders regularly consulting youth before making decisions. This renewed social trust is a key human outcome, demonstrating that peacebuilding is not only about institutions but also about rebuilding the social fabric of everyday life.

4. Reduced Vulnerability and Strengthened Resilience

By linking youth inclusion with local development planning and livelihood opportunities, the project has indirectly contributed to economic and social resilience. Many young people who participated in advocacy and leadership trainings have used their new skills to organize local volunteer groups, started community development initiatives. This has started reducing vulnerability to manipulation, idleness, or involvement in divisive violent activities. The sense of purpose and belonging created through this project has started helping young people view themselves as contributors to community progress, rather than outsiders.

5. Healing and Emotional Well-Being

Through structured dialogues and peace activities, the project created safe spaces for communities to process grievances and past tensions in a non-confrontational way. Participants especially youth reported feeling “heard” for the first time. Young people have also built strong peer support networks through the Regional and District Youth Committees, where they can share experiences, challenges, and aspirations. These networks now serve as informal psycho-social support systems that strengthen individual and collective well-being.

PART IV: Monitoring, Evaluation and Compliance

» Monitoring

Please list key monitoring activities undertaken in the reporting period *

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

During the reporting period, four monitoring visits were conducted to track implementation progress, assess quality and ensure accountability to stakeholders. Monitoring approach combined both quantitative and qualitative methods and actively engaged communities, youth, and local authorities in data collection and reflection processes. Comprehensive field monitoring visits were conducted across all targets Local Government Areas (LGAs). These visits were separately carried out by the Project Team, including DoYS, Senior Management Team and the M&E Manager of AAITG. The visits assessed the changes happening as a result of the project interventions, such as inter-generational dialogues, capacity-building workshops, advocacy campaigns, and youth civic education camps. Monitoring teams used tools to document progress, identify good practices, and address emerging implementation challenges. Feedback sessions were held with community stakeholders to validate findings and areas of improvement.

During the AAITG annual Programme, Review and Reflection Process (PRRP) several project beneficiaries were visited to gauge their views on the implemented activities.

Quarterly review and coordination meetings were held with Project Technical Committee, implementing partners, and Government Partners where the project progress, success stories and challenges as well as the way forward were discussed. During the last quarter review meeting, the acceleration plan was discussed and agreed to improve project implementation. These meetings provided a platform to share field findings, and analyze lessons learned for improve project delivery and performance. These meetings also strengthened coordination among partners and ensured consistent quality standards across regions.

Routine data verification was carried out to ensure accuracy, reliability, and completeness of monitoring data submitted by partners. The Project Team cross-checked reported figures with source documents (attendance registers, and training records).

☒ Yes

☐ No

If yes, please provide a brief description. If not, explain why not and when they will be available. *

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

Yes. Outcome indicators for this project were established with clearly defined baseline values at the inception stage to measure progress toward youth inclusion, strengthened governance, and enhanced social cohesion. The baselines were determined through a combination of quantitative and qualitative assessments, stakeholder consultations, and participatory community appraisals conducted across target Local Government Areas (LGAs). Baseline data were collected through surveys, focus group discussions (FGDs), and key informant interviews (KIIs) with youth, women, traditional authorities, and local government representatives. The process was led by a technical Consultant. Standardized tools were developed to capture both numerical and perceptual indicators, ensuring gender and age dis-aggregation. Data collection was complemented by desk reviews of existing records, policy documents, and youth development plans to validate institutional indicators. Findings were then consolidated into baseline reference values that serve as the foundation for subsequent monitoring and evaluation. It is noted that the outcome indicators for outcome two do not march with the outcome. In this regard, these outcome indicators were changed as in the report. See Outcome 2

Data sources are available with both AAITG and implementing partners and drawn from project narrative and financial reports as well as attendance register maintained by AAITG and implementing partners. The attendance registers show the list of participant who attended the various activities. It dis-aggregates the participants by sex, age and disability status. The narrative reports highlight the outputs of the activity, number of participants, topic discussed and feedback from participants. The Financial reports indicate the retirement of funds disbursed.

Has the project used or established community feedback mechanisms?

Community feedback mechanism, or community-based monitoring, is an organized system for communities of participants to monitor the local effects and impact of an intervention. Ideally, this system empowers the community to express whether their expectations are being met and to provide suggestions to decision-makers for possible (re)focusing. Yes, the AAITG PRRP and monitoring process resonate with the PBF Community Feedback Mechanism. These PRRP and field monitoring visits are conducted in safe spaces with beneficiary communities without the presence of the implementing partners. The processes encourage open feedback from the beneficiaries, which are further discussed during the technical review meeting.

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

The project has generated significant non-financial catalytic effects by removing long-standing political, institutional, and sociocultural barriers that limited youth inclusion and participation in civic and peacebuilding processes. It has strengthened collaboration between generations, enhanced institutional responsiveness, and established sustainable mechanisms for inclusive governance and peace consolidation at national, regional, and community levels.

Through the Intergenerational Dialogue on Civic Space, the project created an enabling platform where traditional leaders, youth, and women jointly reflected on civic participation and governance. These dialogues held across all regions of the project challenged entrenched social norms and opened spaces for youth engagement in decision-making. Traditional leaders, including Chiefs, Alkalolu, and Councillors, publicly endorsed youth inclusion, demonstrating a transformative attitudinal shift that has unblocked previously resistant social and political structures.

The door-to-door campaign for youth inclusion in Village, directly reached opinion leaders, local authorities, and women and youth representatives. This community-based engagement increased local awareness and buy-in, resulting in widespread commitments to integrate young people into governance processes.

Through youth-led advocacy and lobbying campaigns, implemented in collaboration with the Rural Women Assembly, the project reached 38 District Chiefs and 5 Area Councils. These engagements led to formal commitments to include youth in community governance structures, reinforcing ownership, and accountability at the local level.

The project further supported the roll-out of the Youth, Peace and Security (YPS) Action Plan, sensitizing youth in five Local Government Areas. This created vital linkages between local youth initiatives and the national YPS agenda, establishing a coherent framework for youth-led peacebuilding and conflict prevention.

The project also advocated for the institutionalization of youth development funding, successfully influencing councils in four LGAs to allocate at least 5% of their community development revenues to youth empowerment initiatives embedding youth inclusion within formal policy and budgetary mechanisms.

The regional civic education camps, Reflect Action Circles, and peace camps is promoting dialogue, and social cohesion among diverse youth groups. These activities fostered positive youth engagement and built networks of peace advocates committed to sustaining local stability.

Overall, the project catalysed systemic change by unblocking barriers to youth participation, embedding inclusive governance practices in local institutions, and fostering durable partnerships among government, traditional authorities, and civil society.

Sustainability

Please describe any steps that have been taken to ensure the sustainability of peacebuilding gains, including any mechanisms, platforms, networks and socio-economic initiatives supported, beyond the duration of the project

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

To ensure the sustainability of peace-building gains, AAITG strategically chose existing partners at national and grass-root levels. The Department of Youth and sports under the Ministry of Youth and Sports and support their capacity building as primary duty bearers to help them to enhance their understanding for provision of quality youth responsive services. This is done through the national and rural levels structures to ensure mainstreaming and continuity beyond the project's duration. Capacity building is not only limited to the ministry but is also extended to CSOs and CBOs at national to regional level. For example, the development and hosting of the data based by Ministry of Communication Digital Economy was done for sustenance of the data base.

Furthermore, some of these partners are Youth-led Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) and Community-Based Organizations (CBOs) who have been actively engaged in implementing impact activities deeply rooted in their respective areas in promoting peace-building initiatives. By collaborating with these established organizations, the project ensures improved local capacity for continuity and sustainability. By actively involving young people in decision-making processes and community activities, we foster a sense of ownership and responsibility among them. This engagement not only empowers youth but also strengthens the social fabric of the community, ensuring that peace-building efforts are deeply rooted and supported by the very individuals they aim to benefit.

Additionally, we have continued to work closely with the local authorities to enable the opening of local platforms for dialogue and inclusion of youth and other relevant stakeholders. This will facilitate ongoing discussions about youth participation and civic engagement and will eventually enhance their inclusion. These platforms will serve as a space for sharing best practices, addressing challenges, and celebrating successes, thereby reinforcing the commitment to peacebuilding beyond the project's duration.

In summary, through strategic partnerships, active youth engagement, collaborative platforms, and socioeconomic initiatives, AAITG is dedicated to ensuring the sustainability of peace-building gains beyond the project's lifespan by mainstreaming some of the project initiatives in its core programs. This project will add value to the ongoing work of local partners including the government, and this will therefore continue to engage stakeholders on youth participation in the civic space to sustain this noble initiative.

Are there any other issues concerning project implementation that you want to share, including any capacity needs of the recipient organizations?

Please limit your response to 3000 characters.

While the project has achieved some catalytic results in promoting youth inclusion, strengthening local governance, and fostering social cohesion, several implementation issues and capacity needs have been identified through monitoring visits, partner consultations, and community feedback processes. Addressing these gaps will be critical to consolidating results and ensuring long-term sustainability.

Although, AAITG supported the CBOs capacity on financial management they still have limited technical and managerial capacity in areas such as project planning, data management, results-based reporting, and resource mobilization are some of the gaps noted.

Suggested Action:

- ☐ Provide targeted training on Monitoring, Evaluation, Accountability, and Learning (MEAL) systems and introduction of simplified data collection and reporting templates.
- ☐ Conduct regular coaching and mentoring sessions for them
- ☐ Strengthen partners' capacity in proposal writing and fundraising to enhance sustainability beyond project funding.
