A Joint Country Programme by FAO, IFAD, UNWOMEN and WFP in partnership with the Government of Niger through the Ministry of Agriculture, Initiative I3N, Ministry of livestock, Ministry of population, advancement of women and protection of children

Country Programme Proposal

Country:	Niger
Project Title:	Accelerating Progress Towards Economic Empowerment of Rural Women in Niger (RWEE)
Total budget requested	US$..... 5 116 381,55
Beneficiaries to be assisted with the contribution	Direct Beneficiaries : 25200 = 16800 Rural Women + 8400 rural men Indirect Beneficiaries: 252 000=168 000 Women + 84000 men
Duration of project:	November 2012 – October 31, 2017

1. Brief Background Information

In November 2012 a Concept Note was signed by all four agencies in Niger as a result of a consultative workshop held in Niamey (Note Conceptual Programme Conjoint Niger). This document illustrates the added value and strengths of each agency, synergies between different activities, and principles of collaboration, program delivery, roles and responsibilities and description of the activities.

Since the beginning, the process of the JP in Niger has been fully participatory. All four participating UN-Agencies and relevant Government Ministries and rural communities have shown commitment and willingness for the process to succeed. The Government has been involved since the beginning of the process and participates in the design and follow-up of the JP.

1.Sub-program1: Equitable promotion of women's situation and social position; Sub-program 2: Equitable promotion of women and men's potential and position within the household and market economies: Sub-program3: Strengthening the effective application of the rights of women and girls, of the fight against gender-based violence and equitable participation of women and men in managing power; Sub-program 4: Strengthening the intervention capacities of the institutional framework to implement the National Gender Policy (NGP), so as to achieve improved harmonization and synergy in gender interventions. –

3. Justification for the intervention

Isolated State in the Sahel region, Niger has a rural sector which constitutes the first branch of industry in the national economy with a contribution to the formation of the country's GDP of about 41,69%. The population of Niger is estimated at 17,129,076 habitants (RGPH 2012) with a rate of increase in 3, 3%. The women, who account for 50,1% of this population live in majority in rural areas (78, 3%).

In the particular context of Niger, factors such as climate change, drought-related contingencies, food and nutrition crises, regular floods, locust invasions, large influx of refugees, create a difficult environment that threatens rural people's livelihoods.

In addition to this, rural women and girls face specific constraints that hamper their well-being and socio-economic potential (the 4 out of 5 poor people are women). These constraints include: illiteracy (literacy rate for those aged 15 and above (that is, who can read and write) is 19.1% (male: 27.3%; female: 11% (2015) , very high fertility rates (index of fruitfulness is 7, 6 children per woman – (EDSN 2012), limited access to productive resources (land, agricultural inputs, finance and credit, extension services, and technology); weak access, to public services, social protection, information, innovations and local and national markets and institutions due to entrenched cultural norms and security challenges.

Women are over-burdened with household choirs (preparation of the meals, drudgery of collecting wood and water, transformation of agricultural produce, pastoral work, and education of the children), petty trading, taking care of the sick and elderly, the weight of the traditions and the habits. Traditional education legitimates disparities between men and women through cultural patterns that influence common perception to accept this social construct. As regards gender equity, Niger was classified in 2014 as a country presenting high levels of gender discrimination (SIGI-social institutions and gender index).

This is the reason why the JP in Niger puts particular emphasis on rural women's empowerment, poverty reduction, food and nutrition security, resilience, climate change adaptation, social mobilization and community development. Activities in these areas appear to be a priority to break the vicious circle of shocks and humanitarian crises, as well as their induced effects on the precarious living conditions of the population.

This program is perfectly aligned with the development objectives of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF-2014-2018) of Niger[1], in particular with its three cross-cutting themes and with the Thematic Area 1 (resilience), 2 (social development and human capital) and 3 (governance, peace and security). In addition, the JP activities will contribute to the process of the MDG Acceleration Framework (MAF) which in Niger is oriented towards achieving food and nutrition security.

By enhancing the agricultural productivity of rural communities, improving their food and nutrition security and ensuring rural women and men's access to resources, information and services, the JP makes an important contribution to the work carried out by the System of the United Nations (SNU) in Niger.

The interventions of the JP are also in line with the development objectives of the Government of Niger, notably the 3N Initiative ("Les Nigériens Nourissent les Nigériens"). The Government has introduced its 3N Initiative in 2011 to increase the country's resilience to food crises and reduce poverty through agricultural reform. Within this framework, the approach of the "communes de convergence" has been developed to accelerate the achievement of the MDGs. According to this approach development actors should conduct complementary activities in the poorest geographical areas to reduce vulnerability, maximize impact and

The activities of the JP in Niger are implemented through a multi-sectorial approach based on strengthening the synergies among the Participating UN Organizations in those geographical areas where entry points and good practices have been identified. The Advisory Technical Committee has agreed to work together in those geographical areas where almost two agencies are present (regions of Dosso and Maradi). To comply with the government's efforts, the selected zones of intervention (choice of "communes de convergence" that has been singled out by the government) are in line with the approach of the "communes de convergence". The combination of efforts will ensure complementarity of field actions and the interventions will target the same villages and beneficiaries so as to maximize impact.

- Targeting beneficiaries

The RWEE-Niger Joint Program has planned interventions in the following four municipalities (communes de convergence), Fawel and Sokorbé in region of Dosso; and Jirataoua et Guidan Amoumoune in the region of Maradi, given that:

- The High Commission of the 3N Initiative consider that municipalities play a crucial role in the country's development and uses them as an entry point for implementation of its programme.
- The United Nations agencies believe that a significant and sustainable impact can be achieved for the target population by pooling their resources, skills, comparative advantages and mutual synergies, and through partnerships to strengthen resilience.

In these four municipalities, ten villages have been identified in 2015 and ten more will be identified in 2016. (villages of Falwel municipality area are: FALWEL ; DEY TEGUI YAMBA ; KOKOUKOU; MALLAM KOIRA ; TEGOIZE KOIRA ZENO ; villages of Jirataoua municipality area are: Tajaé Peulh ; El Kokia Sofoua ; Danja ; Doulou II et Namaroua. The identification is based on consensual criteria agreed at technical committee meetings and validated by the municipality (For example: the village of Dollouli in Jirataoua municipality area has been identified because more than 50%. of the population are women. Also, each village is a central village around which satellite villages gravitate and the population is over 500 inhabitants. This enables a larger outreach and a greater number of beneficiaries.

The program has also identified FAO's participatory approach of the Dimitra Clubs as an entry point for its activities and is setting up in each village six Dimitra Clubs, each with 30 members (four for women and two for men). Club membership is voluntary. The initiatives and achievements that result from the Dimitra Clubs benefit the whole village, since the process is participatory and inclusive and is based on sharing information and decision-making. Indeed, although the priority impact group is made up of women, the program also targets specific groups, both directly and indirectly:

Directly targeted groups

Women and men who are members of Dimitra Clubs are targeted for all program activities: these are 16 800 women and 8 400 men living in 20 villages in the four municipalities identified in the regions of Maradi and Dosso. All joint program activities are discussed and/or coordinated within these clubs at village level. For example, for targeting beneficiaries and selection of cereals and improved seed/agricultural inputs, small ruminant kits (IFAD activity); discussions on the composition of management committees for multifunctional platforms (UN Women); participation in local procurement and Food for Assets activities (WFP), etc.

1.Sub-program1: Equitable promotion of women's situation and social position; Sub-program 2: Equitable promotion of women and men's potential and position within the household and market economies: Sub-program3: Strengthening the effective application of the rights of women and girls, of the fight against gender-based violence and equitable participation of women and men in managing power; Sub-program 4: Strengthening the intervention capacities of the institutional framework to implement the National Gender Policy (NGP), so as to achieve improved harmonization and synergy in gender interventions. – responsible for:

- Joint development of the programme of activities and budget;
- Joint and coordinated targeting of villages where the programme will be implemented;
- Consolidating and submitting periodic reports to the national steering committee for validation;
- Ensuring regular monitoring of activities and drawing up recommendations for actors in the field;
- Ensuring synergies between all partners;
- Building on good practices of activities in the joint programme.

The national steering committee is made up of rural women's representatives (two women per municipality), a senior official per agency, and high-ranking officials from the state technical services (under-secretaries general of the regional governorates of Dosso and Maradi, the director of women's economic empowerment, the under-secretary general of the Ministry of Population, Promotion of Women and Child Protection, the secretary general of the High Commission for the 3N Initiative and the secretary general of the Ministry of Agriculture).

It is responsible for:

- Defining strategic guidelines and implementation procedures for the Joint Programme;
- Conducting advocacy activities for resource mobilization;
- Examining and approving planning and funding allocation for the various components proposed by the technical committee;
- Examining and validating periodic technical and financial reports submitted to the technical committee;
- Representing the Niger Joint Programme on the international steering committee.

In line with its terms of reference, the technical committee holds monthly meetings, aimed at targeting villages where the program is implemented where necessary, and above all at joint planning of activities in the field. In an effort to encourage effective collaboration between all stakeholders (including the administrative and traditional authorities), the technical committee organizes fact-finding missions for the stakeholders, during which technical committee proposals for intervention areas are validated. Once implementation of activities in the field has become effective, the technical committee undertakes joint monitoring missions comprising both committee members and municipal authority representatives. A total of five joint monitoring missions have been planned, including three in 2016 and two in 2017.

To strengthen synergy in implementation of activities under the joint program, there are plans to follow the model of the technical and steering committees and set up a platform for information exchange and sharing between the NGOs charged with implementing activities in the field. The aim of the platform is to enable information to flow freely between all actors responsible for implementing activities in the field.

Aside from the institutional mechanisms created, it is important to mention the open collaboration between different stakeholders, not only through planning, but above all through joint implementation of activities in the field. The participation of all agencies in the implementation of certain activities clearly illustrates how synergies are being strengthened through the joint program.

The national coordinator provides the secretariat for both committees. She ensures synergy and facilitates exchanges.

1.Sub-program1: Equitable promotion of women's situation and social position; Sub-program 2: Equitable promotion of women and men's potential and position within the household and market economies: Sub-program3: Strengthening the effective application of the rights of women and girls, of the fight against gender-based violence and equitable participation of women and men in managing power; Sub-program 4: Strengthening the intervention capacities of the institutional framework to implement the National Gender Policy (NGP), so as to achieve improved harmonization and synergy in gender interventions. –

- Various training will be carried out: the Joint Program aims to improve the livelihoods of rural women and strengthen their rights within a framework of sustainable development, helping to forge women's leadership, while improving food and nutrition security and contributing to increased incomes for rural women, so that they can meet their basic requirements. In order to achieve these goals, the joint programme must take a two-pronged approach, working at both collective and individual levels, and include a number of training activities.

Various training initiatives will enable the joint programme to improve women's social position in the target communities.

- Women's education levels: there is a very high proportion of women with poor education levels in rural areas. The majority of women in the programme intervention areas are illiterate, so there is a need to conduct various types of training activities, both professional and technical.
- Women have shown their capacity to organize themselves outside official circles, for example, through tontines. The rigour they have demonstrated in conducting these activities reveals the need to strengthen their capacities in several areas: agency capacity, accounts and administrative management, processing techniques, etc.
- In Niger, and especially in rural areas, women are kept in the background when it comes to access to knowledge, production factors and being involved in important decisions for the household and community. Through this range of training activities, the joint programme will enable women to receive training at the same level as men and to carry out their own activities in an official setting (legal recognition for groups).
- Institutional strengthening and improved capacities in governance, equality, functional literacy, and management, etc. answer the need for target communities to be able to address major challenges, demonstrate their capacity for action, bolster their credibility, become acknowledged and legitimate actors in policy and influence decisions that concern them.

Several types of training are planned, notably for strengthening organisational capacities (farmers' organizations), gender and community development, technical training, exchange visits, functional literacy, women's leadership, management techniques for activities and credit, nutrition, learning agricultural techniques through practice and discussion; access to socio-economic opportunities; collective action; capacities for advocacy, access to information, etc.
Through FAO-Dimitra Clubs, all these training activities will be carried out in a coordinated manner, in accordance with the real needs and requests of beneficiaries.

Monitoring and evaluation

Monitoring

Operational monitoring is guaranteed at various levels: the first level involves close monitoring by the national coordinator and/or by the NGOs responsible for implementing the program. The agencies' sub-offices/ offices also carry out close monitoring of activities, together with decentralized technical services and partners. The second level of operational monitoring is conducted during joint supervision missions: the agencies and focal points of the ministries concerned organize joint supervision missions, involving their representatives at central, regional or departmental level. The technical committee has planned three joint missions in 2016 and two in 2017.

1.Sub-program1: Equitable promotion of women's situation and social position; Sub-program 2: Equitable promotion of women and men's potential and position within the household and market economies: Sub-program3: Strengthening the effective application of the rights of women and girls, of the fight against gender-based violence and equitable participation of women and men in managing power; Sub-program 4: Strengthening the intervention capacities of the institutional framework to implement the National Gender Policy (NGP), so as to achieve improved harmonization and synergy in gender interventions. –
